

ROTC Listings Available Now

Colonel C. L. Sampson, head of the military department, stated today that five vacancies still exist in the advanced course in the military department. The following students are qualified to fill these vacancies: B. E. Fox, Arthur B. Hillabold, Eugene Q. Bennett, Charles F. Larson, Dick D. Bennett, Leonard E. Lonigan, Henry R. Howard, James C. Ricksecker, William C. Murray.

So far, the military department has been unable to contact these students. If they desire to enroll in the advanced training course they should get in touch with Major Blythe at once.

Student Affairs

Scheduling another meeting for Tuesday of next week, the student affairs committee met Wednesday to discuss the campus social calendar for the year. The complete calendar will not be approved until next week. Rally squad activities were also discussed.

Kwama Pledges Two

Kwama, sophomore women's honorary, last night tapped Flora Kibler and Joanne Dolph as pledges. The two new girls will take the places of Barbara Hannum and Carolyn Vaughn, who did not return to school this year.

"The Religion of Greece in Prehistoric Times," a volume by Dr. Axel W. Persson, noted Swedish archaeologist, has just been published by the University of California Press.

Skunks Rout Law Expert

"It made a man out of me," said C. G. Howard, professor of law, in telling of his patriotically spent summer.

Mr. Howard, working for the U.S. forest service, was forest guard at Camp Cupola, one-half mile from Clear Lake, Oregon.

He described his nights as "one long skunk chase." It seems that the "B.O." boys of the animal kingdom made nightly commando raids on the camp, forcing Professor Howard and his colleagues to make retaliatory raids.

Howard reports that his main accomplishments of the summer were putting out two fires, sawing four cords of wood, and registering 2,294 people at his station.

Lost, Found Articles

The University lost and found department announced Wednesday the accumulation of several articles that have been found since the beginning of this term. Students claiming lost goods are asked to pay a five cent recovery fee.

The articles are one cigarette case, two checkbooks (one with money), a pair of glasses, two English composition books, one binder, and a fountain pen.

CAMPUS CALENDAR

Phi Beta, music honorary, will meet at 7:15 p.m. Thursday in Gerlinger.

Westminster House is having its first potluck dinner at 6 o'clock tonight. Bring a contribution and come.

Physics Department Increases Enrollment

The University physics department has announced a decided increase in enrollment as compared to last year at this time. To date 833 students have enrolled compared to the 309 of last year.

This increase is accredited to the war emergency and the fact that the government is asking for men and women with one year of college physics. In accordance with this emergency a course in meteorology and a course in radio practice have been included in the physics curriculum.

Columbia university sophomores studying humanities are permitted to don earphones to listen to musical recordings.

Eighty-five per cent of Harvard students are "convinced that the United States was right in entering the war."

Orders have been accepted to supply the Louisiana State university library with steel stacks for 50,000 additional books.
