

IF A BUDDY MEET A BUDDY-

Four University of Oregon graduates are among new army air force pilots who were graduated recently from the Gulf Coast air force training center, a news release from Randolph field, Texas, stated.

Their graduation marked the end of 27 weeks' thorough intensive flight training. At present they are no doubt in active combat.

The four pilots include: Lieut. Michael L. Clemens, San Francisco, Calif., (Foster field, Texas); Lieut. Roy W. Hollowwa, Denton, Texas, (Lubbock, Texas); Lieut. Robert G. Lundell, Marshfield, Oregon, (Lubbock, Texas); and Lieut. Jack W. Richter, Culver City, Calif., (Lubbock, Texas.)

Normal L. Easley, a graduate of the University in 1938 and of the Northwestern College of Law in 1941, has been graduated from Midshipmen's training school, Northwestern university, Chicago, the thirteenth Naval district reported recently. He received his commission as ensign in the Naval reserve after completing a four month's training course in Naval fundamentals.

Ensign Easley is the son of Mrs. Lula Easley of 6536 N.E. Alameda St., Portland.

News has been received of the selection of a former University student, Corporal Charles F. Mallory, as one of eight enlisted men named by a special board of officers of the West Coast Army Air Forces training center, Santa Ana, Calif., to attend a class of the AAF Officer Candidate school at Miami Beach, Florida, late last summer.

On the UO campus Corporal Mallory was a member of Sigma Nu fraternity. Since his college days he has done feature work as a correspondent for the San Francisco Chronicle and the San Jose Mercury-Herald. Following enlistment in the army at Moffett field in December, 1941, Corp. Mallory was assigned to duty in the public relations office of the WCAAFTC.

The following six former University students have been graduated from the school for newly commissioned Naval officers at Treasure island, San Francisco: Lieut. W. L. Davies, Lieut. Jack L. Meier, Lieut. W. D. Winter and Ensign F. H. Callister, all of Portland; Ensign L. Healy, Santa Rosa, Cal., and Ensign J. E. Farrar of Tustin, Calif.

Cameron Lee Collier, of Inglewood, Calif., and a former UO student, has been commended on his promotion to a Naval flying officer by Capt. John D. Price, commandant of the U.S. Naval air station, Jacksonville, Fla.

While at the University Ensign Collier was active in football, basketball, and track, and was a member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

Former Housemother Visits Alpha Delta Pi

Mrs. Lucy Perkins, housemother of Alpha Delta Pi until last year, visited the ADPis over Thursday and Friday. A tea was held for her Friday afternoon by the housemothers on the campus at the ADPi house.

Mrs. Perkins has been housemother and a member of Alpha Delta Pi since the organization of its University chapter.

Carey Directs Dance Band

Within three weeks Oregon will again have its own all-student dance orchestra, according to George Carey, leader of the newest band in Eugene.

The band has been rehearsing nightly for the past week, improving their style.

"Smooth Style"

According to Carey, the band will have four saxes, five brasses, and three rhythm instruments, and will feature a girl vocalist. Their style is to be "smooth," but with "plenty of rhythm." Since all the players are students, Carey expects them to judge what kind of music students like, and he will feature it as often as possible.

"This is a band for the students," he says, "and we will play the kind of music they want."

Crying Need

The chief reason the orchestra has been formed is to meet a crying need for a band to play for house dances and for all-campus dances at the Igloo. Houses have always had trouble in the past getting bands when they want them, because there are only two in Eugene available for student dances, and they are usually booked up for the year before the fall term begins. The orchestra is being booked by the Spider Dickson Enterprises.

UO Buildings Get New Tops

What's cooking in the Commerce building's backyard is asphalt.

No student who has frequented the old Oregon campus in the past few days can be unaware of the fact that the roofs of some of the buildings are being tarred. It is apparent not only to the sense of smell. Crashes are heard at irregular intervals as sections of the old roofing are thrown down. The classes nearby calmly go on with their studies until an extra loud crash almost sends some in search of air raid shelters.

The work of tarring is an interesting but smelly job. Before it can be done the old roof has to be ripped up. Then a layer of asbestos is laid down and after that a layer of asphalt.

The asphalt comes in blocks which have to be chopped up with an ax before it can be put in the stove. When it is melted, it is poured into buckets and hoisted to the men on the roof. There they spread it on with a mop.

No Materials

It was hoped that work would be finished before school started. Dr. Will V. Norris, professor of physics, who is in charge of the project, said that the materials were ordered early in the summer. Because of the war they did not arrive until now.

The contractors are Johns-Manville, who estimate the cost at about $3000. Armpriest-Elstrom Co. are doing the work and are hurrying to keep ahead of the rain. With the men's dorm and the art and journalism buildings finished, and the commerce building almost completed, all that remains is the Oregon building.

It was thought that the work would last only about ten days more, but Mr. Harold Elstrom, veteran of the business, says that if the gravel roof of the Oregon building is as hard to rip up as that of the Commerce building, it will be another two weeks.

The University of Wisconsin Scandinavian department, first of its kind in any American university, rounded out its seventieth year recently.

UO Students to Meet Squad at Depot Sunday

University students are to meet at the Southern Pacific depot Sunday for the first rally of the year, scheduled for meeting Oregon's football players returning from Saturday's game with WSC at Pullman.

Converging on the station at 12:35, the rally will meet the southbound "Klamath," according to Clint Paine, rally chairman.

In an effort to get every student at the station, fraternities and men's dorms will be assigned to pick up members of sororities and women's halls and take them to the station, Paine said.

YW Tea Popular

Over 200 students attended the first YWCA tea held in the bungalow Thursday afternoon, Mrs. E. E. DeCou, executive secretary, announced.

As a part of the program, Nancy Hallock sang "One Kiss" and Music Chairman Stephanie Peterson led those present in the group singing of such songs as "Down by the Old Millrace" and "Oregon Pledge Song."

Tea was served together with cookies baked by YW members the morning of the get-together, Kathryn Dunn, tea chairman, reported.

CAMPUS CALENDAR

Unaffiliated men have been invited to a Yeomen meeting in the men's lounge at Gerlinger, Monday at 7:30 p.m.

The Orides meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Gerlinger hall will be open house for all women unaffiliated with any living organization on the campus.

UO War Work Pictured In Portland Magazine

University of Oregon's war effort received recognition in the October issue of "The Spectator," monthly magazine published in Portland.

Including pictures, the story "Higher Education War-Lined in Oregon" outlined courses pertaining to the war effort now being offered students at Oregon's seven schools of higher education.

The University came in for its share of the publicity with a page of pictures and an outline of the courses available here which will be valuable to students during the war. The magazine is on sale at the Co-op.
