Phi Theta President Pauses to Confess All

By BETTY ANN STEVENS

While nibbling potato chips and washing them down with lemon coke, Phi Beta Upsilon president Marge Curtis sat in the Side and submitted to being interviewed for the "Coed of the Week."

"It's fun to interview people," observed journalism-major Marge, with a flash of white teeth.

Offering Barbara "Lambie-Pie" Lamb some potato chips, she smiled again and remarked, as a peroxide blonde streak sailed by, "I had one once . . . spring term when I was a freshman, so I can't say anything."

"From California? No!" she gasped, her eyeballs popping. "I've been there twice, but I don't live there, I'm flattered! I love California, and I'd like to live there . . . either near Palo Alto or Malibu . . . I love the climate," she concluded enthusiastically.

Marge insists that her dark coloring "isn't a Max Factor product!" "It's a five-hour Sea-side creation. I stayed out in the sun for five hours last summer, and just got cooked."

An Alpha Chi, "Curt" (has been a "white weather girl," (Kwama to you), Phi Theta Upsilon president, sophomore vice-president, co-chairman of a nickel hop, and has done Emerald work and publicity for Homecoming.

"Do I have an activity-girl stride?" She smiled her slow smile and responded, "Every once in a while I find myself walking too fast, so I just slow down and say, 'Curtis, what's the hurry?'"

"Oh, I just got out of copy-editing lab, and I'm simply worn out," she sighed. "Just think what will happen next year when I shall be writing three theses! I'll be in hibernation for the duration," she said with soft precision.

Scooting out of the booth—"Excuse me a minute, I'll be right back," she joined some friends in a neighboring booth.

Back again, she reached for a coke and revealed, "I have to write notes to myself for everything . . . I hate eight o'clocks, and I don't have any this term. . . . I hate to get up . . . I hate cold showers . . . I don't like to play bridge . . . Everyone told me that I would have to play when I came to college," . . . ("Lambie-Pie" interrupted with a giggle). "But I don't. I play only when I'm forced to."

"Man-hater? No!" she distinctly declared.

In a more serious vein "Curt" continued, "What I'd like to do when I get out of school is to write radio scripts. I published two.—Either that or advertising." She laughingly added, draining the last of her coke, "I'll probably end up in a dime store, though."

Looking at her watch, she raised both eyebrows, and gently but firmly announced, "I've got to rush to a rush meeting right away." Then, as an afterthought . . . "I'm not a chairman, just assistant."

Etiquette

If you go to a dance, don't look for romance, Though you may like the praises he's sung you, With a man that is new, here is what you should do— Just stick with the guy what bring you.

It's not wise, my dear, if you disappear With a partner you've traded among you In the midst of a waltz—though he may have his faults, You should stick with the guy what bring you.

If you're with a blind date who just doesn't rate And the sister who made it has stung you, Don't flit with another, he may be his brother, Just stick with the guy what bring you.

Good Taste Misplaced

By MARY ANN CAMPBELL

At the risk of being the recipients of a frown from the army, we are going to comment upon the weather. We aren't giving away any secrets, because this particular phenomenon has been happening regularly for years. Have you noticed how the rain, which is coming down very brisk-like at 10 minutes to the hour, stops on the hour, just after the bell rings. Then, bright sunlight until it's time for classes to let out. Whoops, More RAIN! And it rains for the regulation 10 minutes.

Query: Would it be better to leave class five minutes early or arrive in class five minutes late? Or do both???

Dr. Hernane Tavares da Sa feels rather strongly about the marvelous misinformation American journalists hand out about South America. He told Dean Allen's editing class yesterday that it takes a long time to learn about a country to report on it intelligently. In fact, according to Mr. Tavares, learning about a country is like learning about a woman . . . it takes a lot of Time, Trouble, and Thought, because the subject is so complex and varied.

The Gamma Phis, who were all bursting with patriotism when they all went out to pick filberts, promised to return on Saturday to spend the day picking nuts again. The morning after their field day, they found rising difficult, climbing stairs was positively Hard Work, and just walking around was Torture.

Piggers, Gals Get Set For Social Weekend

By LOIS HULSER
Society Editor

Coeds are putting looseleaf pages in their date books as five houses entertain this weekend. Friday evening Delta Delta Delta and Delta Upsilon have scheduled radio dances. Sigma Nus are dating for their fireside.

"Screwballs" will dance at Kappa Sigma Saturday with music of Bob Lee's orchestra for the first costume dance of informal fall term. Saturday's calendar includes the Phi Sigma Kappa radio dance.

Last night Beta Pi chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha celebrated the 54th anniversary of their national founding. Guests at the informal dinner included Miss Margarethe Saulstich of Royal Oak, Michigan, national officer, Dean Hazel P. Schwering, and alumnae from Salem, Corvallis, and Eugene.

Tri-Delt Tea

Delta Delta Delta entertained over 200 freshman girls at an informal tea Tuesday. The receiving line included Miss Pearl Bonisteel, Mrs. Tresa Jaynes, and Mary Jane Dunn. An Hawaiian skit was presented with Zoe Littlefield and Dorothy Boller dancing the hula, accompanied by Joan Woodworth.

Who went where for Wednesday evening desserts: Chi Omega-Chi Psi; Theta Chi-Delta Delta Delta; Delta Gamma-Sigma Chi; Beta Theta Pi-Hendricks hall; Alpha Delta Pi-Phi Kappa Psi;
