

The Steers Twins

Duck Gridders Look Lousy In Scrimmage; Sophs Shine

By BILL STRATTON

Of all the workouts the Webfoot grid squad has had this season, probably none have been as unsuccessful as yesterday's. Head Coach Warren commented at the close of the "scrimmage," "What's the matter with you guys . . . does your glory hurt, or is it your feet?"

Regardless of whether it was the glory or feet that hurt, the workout was not a success. Something was the matter with the whole team, that caused dissension in the ranks.

Oxman Injured

The result was practically nothing accomplished, and one injury. Fullback Tom Oxman bruised the knee that has kept him out since the start of the season, but the doc explained that it was nothing serious and he may be ready for the Idaho game a week from Saturday.

Even though a general failure, the workout was not without its good points. The up-and-coming sophomore backs continued to show steady improvement.

Bobby Reynolds and Leroy Erickson shone in the pass slinging department, completing several for long gains and a major portion of the offensive team's yardage in the makeshift scrimmage. Reynolds made considerable yardage from rushing, also.

Ducks Look Good

Sophomore fullback Bill Davis made continual gains through the second string line, except through Tommy Roblin, who was the mainstay of the blue-clad defensive squad.

One change was made in the Duck lineup. Don Brown, sophomore, who hasn't seen much action this year, was changed from blocking back to guard. Brown is still in the formative stage, but "Honest John" said at the first of the season, "Watch this boy; he's a comer." He may still come around this season in his new position.

Fijis, 26—Omega, 0

Led by passing star, Dick Ward, Phi Gamma Delta passed its way to four touchdowns and two extra points to swamp Omega hall, 26-0.

The Fijis scored once in each quarter via the air route with all the touchdown passes hurled by Dick Ward.

The first two scores came on short passes after long drives had put the ball in scoring position. The receivers for these passes were Folquet and Risley.

The last two scores were made on long passes, Sandness and Wilson being the receivers.

Extra points were scored after the second and fourth touchdowns.

The only Omega threat, a 20-yard pass from Callas to Olts fizzled out on the Fiji 15.

through the line on the third play to nab H. Lawrence behind the goal line.

A thirty-yard heave from Cawley to Girdlestone in the third quarter was good for the only touchdown of the game.

Sherry Ross never threatened. Outstanding player of the game was Girdlestone who played beautiful ball both offensively and defensively.

Betas, 34—Sigma Hall, 0

The Beta Tide rolled formidable against Sigma hall in what turned out to be a walk-away for the mill race boys to the tune of 34 to 0. With Bob Duden tossing the sphere all over the field to gents like Warren Finke, Crowell, Jack Warnes, and Bill Read, the Betas scored in each quarter.

The winners thwarted all attempts by the hall men to muster up any kind of an offense.

ATO, 8—Campbell, 0

A blocked kick by Bud Vandeynde gave the ATOs a touchdown over Campbell in the second quarter, and they grabbed a safety in third to put on the clincher and win the game, 8 to 0.

The blocked kick came when a Campbell kicker, booting from his goal line was a mite too slow and Bud blocked the attempted kick for six points for the ATOs.

Al Rouse, ATO speedster, got away for several rambling runs during the game but they all came in the middle of the field and went for naught.

Rose Bowl Big Money—But Not for Oregon State

As a result of its smashing 20-16 victory over Duke in the Rose Bowl game last year, Oregon State received a net profit of $4,434.

While that sum isn't exactly "hay," there's a few facts to be taken into consideration first. The total net profit on the ball game was $179,780.

A Little Here . . .

A cool $81,367 was voted to the Pacific Coast conference and a like amount to Duke's Southeastern league. Oregon State actually received $25,000, but her expenses ran to some $20,576. Subtract this from the above amount and you get your actual figures.

Other people figured in the "rake-off," too. First and foremost was the Rose Bowl committee, usually composed of Pasadena, Calif., business men, last season being made up of Durham, North Carolina, moguls. The war, of course, necessitated the shifting of the football "plum" from the west coast to points east. But that's not all.

There was still the employees who mowed the stadium lawn, who were engaged in other efforts to make the Duke athletic amphitheater a better place in which to view a ball game for your four bucks and forty cents! As you can see, the Beavers got more glory from their victory than pure monetary compensation. Who said football was going commercial, anyway?

All Campus Starts Soon

The deadline for all-campus entries is past and the schedule will be drawn up immediately and play started.

The drawing will be posted at the entrance to the men's PE building with the date on which the matches must be played. It is important that all matches be played as scheduled, urged Paul Washke, intramural director, as weather conditions later in the term will make it difficult to complete the schedule.

Few of the defending champs in the various sports are back this year and the competition in all sports should be wide open.

There will be play in many sports: tennis, golf, ping pong, and handball. Doubles and singles both are planned for each sport.

Schedule Set For Tank Team

The coachless Oregon tank team at least has a schedule for the season.

While the search goes on for a swimming coach for the Duck splashers, the result of Mike Hoyman's resignation last spring, a schedule has been drawn up for the Northern Division and mythical coast champions.

The schedule will include six splashes, three at home and three away from home. The schedule has been cut as compared to last year's setup when the team traveled south to beat the Olympic club, Stanford, and Fresno State. It was after the bathtub brawlers returned from these meets that they plowed through all northern talent and then out-splashed the combined power of their opponents to roll up more points than all competitors and wrap up the crown.

The schedule for this year lists the opener with OSC at Corvallis on January 30. The Beavers come here on February 6, followed by two more home appearances, Idaho on February 12, and Washington State the following night.

The Ducks meet the always powerful Washington team in Seattle on February 20. The Northern Division championship swim has been set for February 27 and will be held at either Seattle or Corvallis.
