

Blue Chins Featured In Week-end Hops

By LOIS HULSER
Society Editor

Bewhiskered sophs will add atmosphere to Friday barn dances as they groom beards for the Whiskerino. The big dance Saturday is the first one o'clock permission of the term. Betty Kincaid and Bill Lyon will cede their title of typical sophomores to a couple from this year's crop of contestants and the best beard will be rewarded by a shave and mug. George Cary is maestro.

House dance season is definitely open and barn dances are showing their usual popularity. Pi Beta Phi are honoring their pledges at a barn dance and Phi Sigma Kappa is having a Wood-chopper's ball with Ed Johnson's band playing for the farmers. Lambda Gamma pledge dance is formal and the sophomores are keeping the theme a deep dark secret. George Carey is playing for the Modern Night Club at Sigma Alpha Epsilon in honor of pledges. Alpha Tau Omega's fire-side is scheduled from 9 to 11.

Housemother Honored

Sunday afternoon Alpha Chi Omega is entertaining at a tea in honor of Mrs. Lela Haynes, their new house mother. In the receiving line with Mrs. Haynes will be Dean Hazel P. Schwering, Mrs. Alice Macduff, Mrs. Bert Kerns, Miss Lillian Dale, and Barbara Jean Tuttle.

The all co-op tea Sunday will be in Gerlinger's Alumni hall

Sunday afternoon. Guests include Miss Janet Smith, Miss Mozelle Hair, Dr. and Dean Schwering, Dean and Mrs. Onthank, Mrs. Alice Macduff, Dean and Mrs. Earl, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Jameson, and Mrs. Donald Erb. Dean Morris will be featured speaker.

Sigma Chis entertained potential sweethearts Tuesday at an informal dessert and have invited the rest of the group for Thursday. Later, girls will be entertained at formal occasions and eliminations begun.

Wednesdays Exchanges

Exchanges last night were Alpha Delta Pi-Phi Gamma Delta; Alpha Omicron Pi-Sigma Phi Epsilon; Alpha Phi-Beta Theta Pi; Alpha Delta Pi-Kirkwood co-op; Sigma Nu-Alpha Chi Omega; Delta Alpha Epsilon-Chi Omega; Delta Delta Delta-Pi Kappa Alpha; Delta Gamma-Kappa Sig-

Dear Spook

It was one of those dark blue Mondays and I had searched my closet through for something colorful enough to jar me out of my dismal state. Nothing but grays, browns, beiges, and trite blues were hanging there. "No better time to go shopping!" I said to my roommate who for once agreed with me, and we were off to find a rainbow.

By chance alone we stumbled onto the greatest single contribution to fashion the world has ever known. The color alone, a warm, mmm, creme de cafe takes it out of this world, but the cut makes you realize that its creator was divinely inspired. The sleeves are wrist length and very, very tight; the V-shaped neckline tapers oh so gradually. Its fitted long torso stops where wide ties begin. These ties are draped at the front, and designed to tie in back, giving an effect of the once-loved bustle. Add a narrow skirt and you have something there!

That took my breath away so my roommate had to carry on. Diving into a new shipment of dresses, she emerged with a yellow ochre wool jersey that buttoned all the way down the back. Three-quarter length sleeves that gathered at the elbow, plus a round neck and perfectly plain bodice were made to flaunt the clip of her choice. You know, it's getting so that when you dress up, you either wear: 1—a clip, 2—an ornament in your hair, or place on feeling very much out of place. Vogue says glitter, so you glitter. (I like my glitter in the form of a jet clip which dazzles at night, and keeps company with matching earrings).

For luck, we each bought a pair of red shoes. She decided on flat ballet-laced ones of deep red, and I chose low sandals whose thin strap buckled a little above my ankle (open-toed, of course).

A little green, perhaps?
No longer blue, but in the pink,
—Gerry Stowell.

AWS Notes

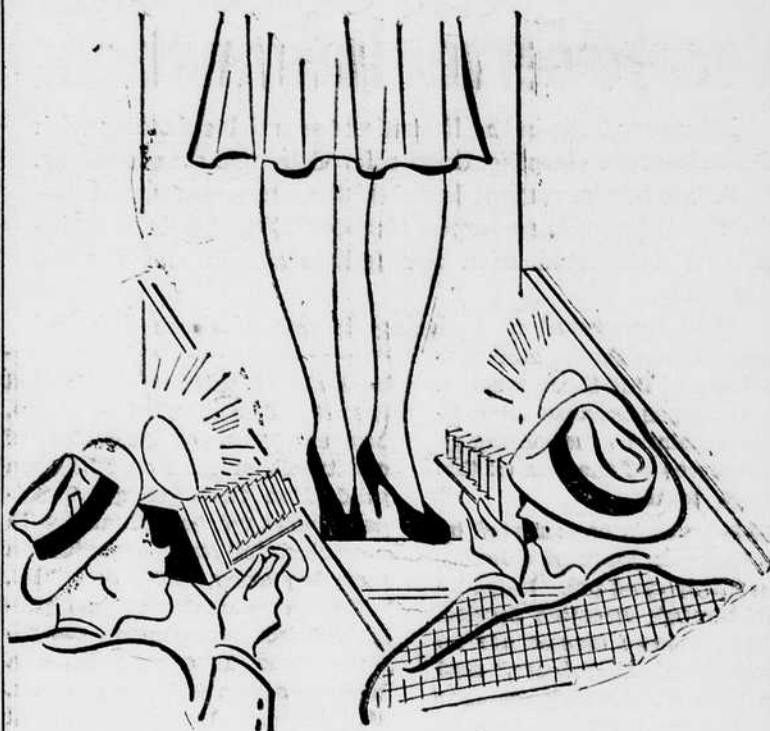

AT LAST! Hallelujah! Amen! No longer is the Coed Capers a titleless orphan.

For the past week AWS prexy, Marge Dibble, has been desperately, frantically, feverishly combing ye campi for a slogan for the Capers, scheduled for November 12. Calling on the Thetas for help, Dib, with a horrible gleam in her eye, offered to the brain submitting the best slogan two packages of cigarettes, and to the non-smokers the equivalent price. . . . "Pewee" Ross, with her hair frantically on end, finger-nails gnawed to the elbow, and three bags under each eye, was no less perturbed. Monday, she was stopping all sympathetic-looking individuals and meekly screaming, "Pardon me, but do you have an idea for Coed Capers? . . . FINALLY, at 10:35 p.m., after a terrific burning-up of telephone wires, the slogan, "The Swing Shifts to Women," was chosen out of a maze of "Wayne's War Widow Wides Again," "Sacks in the WAACS," "Powder Puff Brigade," "Pranks in the Ranks," and "A(II) (W)omen O(n) L(oose) Capers."

. . . Plugs are in order for Mary Louise Vincent and Sue Sawyer, mistresses of ceremonies, who are devouring all mags and radio programs for big ideas to get their script into shape.
