Dr. Kratt Views Music Schools

Dr. Theodore Kratt, dean of the University school of music, will examine the Willamette university school of music November 10 and 11, as the first school he will view in his capacity as a member of the commission on curricula of the National Association of Schools of Music.

Other schools which Dr. Kratt will examine later are the University of Montana and the College of the Holy Names at Oakland, California. The purpose of these examinations is to see how work is progressing in the member schools, and to see that it maintains the standards of the organization.

On November 27 and 28 Dr. Kratt will attend a meeting of the commission on curricula at Chicago. Dr. Kratt has served for many years as a member of this board, being one of its founders in 1926.

Dr. Howard Hanson of the Eastman school of music is president of the Association of Schools of Music. The University of Oregon is one of 150 schools over the nation that belong to this group.

In order to be accredited in this association, schools must comply with standards of equipment, library, scope of facilities, and teaching personnel.
