

Batter UCLA Rose Bowl Hopes, 14-7

Roblin cracking the UCLA forward line continually for substantial gains that netted two touchdowns.

The last half of the Cal game and all of the UCLA game proved that the Oregon team functions better with Roblin in a ball packing position. Warren changed him to quarterback just before the Washington game, but the backfield didn't function quite properly without him.

He has taken over the full-back spot because most of them are on the shelf, and it has given the Ducks new life.

Bobby Reynolds did more than his share of the ball packing Saturday, too. He didn't only run, however. He threw the soggy ball to big Jim Shephard for Oregon's first touchdown, and paid the way so the "Rainbow" could drive seven yards for the final Duck score.

It is hardly fair to give credit to two ball-toting backs, however. Orchids should go to Scrapy Rhea for booting two consecutive points to give him a batting average of 1.000 for the season. He has made nine for nine.

Dyer Makes Tackle
Also in the backfield was neat work by right half, Roy Dyer, who dragged down galloping Al Solari and barely stopped him from scoring on UCLA's first scrimmage play of the ball game.

Len Surles played a bang-up ball game until he was hurt, and was ably replaced by Sophomore Ray Blatchley who saw his first real bit of action against the Bruins.

The Oregon line looked like the best. The Uclans scored over them once—long drives and passes—but the Duck forward wall gave them nothing but a bad time all day long.

Cornell's Frosh

Wheeler pushed through for 21 yards in six attempts. Washington chalked up 13 first downs to Oregon's 7 and gained a total of 204 yards to Oregon's 184.

Woe Is Us

UCLA's previously unsullied PCC slate.

The guys from the Farm, down Stanford way, continued on their unpredictable jaunts by toppling the Washington Huskies, 20-7.

Down south, the House of Troy gave Mickey McCardle full reign and all the little 160-pounder did was stand the Golden Bears of California on their heads. The final was 21-7 on that ball game. Elsewhere, Oregon State garnered some of her self-respect back again, thumping door-mat Montana, 33-0.

Washington State upheld the PCC in an intersectional foray with Michigan State. Boomin' Bob Kennedy, all 200 pounds of him, led his teammates to a 25-13 win. . .

And now a reveille for the Emerald sports staff "egg-sperts" who got together and picked one out of the four games right. . . Slight pause for a breath of air.

expected to compete in the run."

The cross country event will be between the classes that have been organized this year in conjunction with the new mass set-up, and varsity track men are expected to enter, also.

Hayward also stressed yesterday that it is important that all men be at the unfinished area on time in order to get their numbers and start the race on time.

Cross country has been offered before, but never with such a large turnout. Hayward has chosen to call the new program, "military track and field" because it is to get the men prepared for military careers that are waiting for them all.

Stalingrad Battle

named after Joseph Stalin. Stalino, also named after Stalin, but not very significant otherwise, was abandoned. Yet once Stalingrad was decided upon as the cite of the great battle, its emotional value became very prominent.

Russians were and are determined to prevent the Germans from breaking to the Volga and moving still deeper into Russian soil, where no enemy has trodden for over a century. Russians were and are determined that Stalingrad will not become Hitlerburg (as threatened by the Germans.)

All the above mentioned reasons combined to account for the immensity of the battle of Stalingrad. The magnificent Russian defense of the city has already disrupted the German plans. If the Germans fail to take Stalingrad before winter this will endanger their positions on the entire southern Russian front. It would also mean another triumph of the Russian spirit over the German.

And We Will Be Safe

Martha gasped.

"Why . . . why that was the ship . . ."

"I know, dear." John was steady and calm. "But you weren't on it. You're safe with me. You'll always be safe. I'll never, never leave you. And perhaps some day we'll meet Hans and then we can explain to him. He must be a pretty swell guy."

Martha smiled sleepily and snuggled closer.

"He is," she murmured.

Contentment spread over her like a soft, warm blanket. It was so nice to be here before the big window and feel safe, always safe . . . safe, with John always beside her . . . safe.

The radio program mumbled softly into its theme song and the announcer came on to whisper his signing-off speech.

" . . . and so, ladies and gentlemen, station KWOK, Honolulu, signs off for tonight. The time is exactly 1:32 a.m., December 7, 1941."
