

We saw Oregon State beat the Ducks yesterday, 12 to 7. We saw Choc Shelton plow over from the Oregon one-yard marker to put the Beavers out in front. Then came Curt Mecham's tight rope walking for 53 yards, plus Jimmy Newquist's conversion, to put the Ducks out in front. And finally there was Joe Day smashing, dancing, and going 28 yards to give the Beavers the game.

Yes, we saw it yesterday. It was the film from last year's Oregon-Oregon State game which was the last stepping stone on the Beaver's road to the Bowl.

One Touchdown Difference

What about this afternoon is the question now. Will the Beavers notch up another win to make it six out of seven for the series since Stiner took over OSC? The score on the game will be pretty much like the one last year, most experts agree. One touchdown should decide the game. Who's going to get it?

A carrier pigeon smuggled out of Corvallis last night carried a message of great importance. It was, and don't let the military head see this, to-wit: Bell field is dry as a bone. Mark up one for Oregon State.

All year we have thought of Oregon State as just a football team from Corvallis with not very much on the ball. We didn't think they had much in the way of a ball club. Now take a look at some very impressive facts.

Three Deep Everywhere

You see, the Rose Bowl paid off for the Beavers this year. Right now they've got so many darn good players trooping around that Lon Stiner hasn't fully discovered them all yet. They're three deep in every position with seasoned players.

Take a look at the backfield. Oregon has six good backfield men that can be expected to turn in a good game. Oregon State has 13—that is, that's as far as we got before we started seeing spots before our eyes.

Move over to the lefthalf spot and we find Everett Smith. He is a right hander, a nice passer, a powerful runner, and fast for his 190 pounds. Right behind him is Bob Libbe, and to round out the trio is John Beauchamp, the boy that gained his spurs in the Montana game. Nice, isn't it.

Then there's the fullback spot. Joe Day and Choc Shelton. It would be rather silly to say much about either one. Day is considered one of the best fulls on the coast behind Bob Kennedy. Shelton isn't far behind. Bear stories from Corvallis would have you believe that these boys won't be in the game unless the ref lets them use crutches. Smells of "bear stories".

Mustn't overlook the quarterback position. The men run something like this: Marvin Markman, Frank Parker, Boyd Clement, and Stevenson. That's thirteen I think.

Beats What Oregon Has

Anyone of those guys stacks up with the best Oregon can offer in the way of backfield men. The whole carload, excluding Beauchamp, weigh around 190 and are fast and powerful. It makes me wonder why I plunked my next month's allowance on the Ducks and gave three points to boot.

But the picture isn't quite as drab as one would think.

The entire Oregon front wall is ready to play against, excepting Shephard, and should take some of the starch out of the abundance of Beaver talent.

In fact, Jim Shephard might even sneak into the game. Bill Hayward has gone to work on Jim's injured leg and when that cagey gent puts his mind to it he could make a legless man walk again.

Remember Thirteen Fellows Today

We don't imagine the fellows have forgotten the last time they played on Bell field. They were underdogs that muddied day so they merely walloped the Beavers 20 to 0.

And there's one more angle. Thirteen seniors play their last game tomorrow. Most of 'em will probably start. It would be Russ Nowland at end, Ed Moshofsky and Tom Terry, tackles; Val Culwell and Floyd Rhea, guards; Steve Bodner, center; Len Surlles, quarterback; Roy Dyer at half and Tommy Roblin at full. The rest will see plenty of action.

It's their last game for Oregon. We hope it's their best. Remember those names this afternoon.

ATO's Win IM Battles; Fiji 'B's Show Power

Scribes Hold Late Drill; Tickets for Tilt Sold Out

A rough and ready contingent of Emerald Sport staff basketballers left for Corvallis early this morning in a special chartered bus, for their game with the Oregon State Barometer boys tomorrow.

Head Coach Franklin "Ace" Calise put his boys through a stiff drill following the Frosh-Rock football game at Hayward field last night. Lee "Timber!" Flatberg, reserve forward, carried an alarm clock with him to the practice and has it set for 2 a.m.

Drill Broke Up

The monotonous ringing of the gadget finally broke up the Oregon cagers' last workout session. "Doc" Stratton, team trainer, indicated that all of his boys were in fine shape and definitely ready for the contest which is slated for the Oregon State gymnasium at 10:30 a.m.

Phone calls regarding demands for tickets to the casaba classic kept pouring into the Emerald office all day, and the situation grew so serious that eight extra switchboard operators had to be pressed into service, not to mention the labor of a section gang of trunkmen installing new phones. (This last service was only rendered after permission had been received from the government regarding use of priorities in this case.)

Telegrams from the Oregon State athletic department bitterly protested that the Emerald-Barometer basketball game was detracting interest in the Oregon-Oregon State football game. All available seats for tomorrow morning's court war have been grabbed up by enthusiastic fans, and the S.R.O. signs are already decorating the entrances to the Beaver gym.

Odds Questionable

Eugene and Corvallis gambling houses were still haggling over odds, as late as last night.

It is expected that Life magazine will send a special battery of cameramen to cover the contest. All press associations will have representatives on hand.

Coach Calise named the following men to start for the Emerald quintet: Fred Treadgold and Doug Donahue, forwards; Si Sidesinger, center; Bud Moore and Harry Glickman, guards.

Traveling Squad

The complete traveling squad includes, besides the above mentioned, Bob Jackson, Bill Caviness, Reid Farrell, Lee Flatberg and Fred Beckwith.

Last minute rights for broadcasting the game were not able to be attained by the National Broadcasting system.

Watch the Tuesday Emerald for a full coverage of the game.

A $10,570 grant from the United States public health service has been made to the University of Texas John Sealy college of nursing.

The ATO "A" and "B" volleyball squads, and the Fiji "B" team won their volleyball games today.

Behind the effective playing of Bob Macdonald, the ATO senior sextet eked out a 15 to 13, 15 to 12 win over a strong Chi Psi squad in a game that was everything the score indicates. The lead in both contests varied back and forth and the ATOs had to come from behind in the second game to snatch victory from the losers' hands.

Hal Putnam was the mainstay of the Chi Psis.

B's Win Too

The ATO "B" squad also did itself credit when it overpowered a hapless Theta Chi six, 15 to 1, and 15 to 4. The ATOs led throughout the match and their lead was never challenged.

Sparks of the winners were Marv Reater and Bud Vandeneynde.

In another "B" tilt the Fijis bested Alpha hall, 15 to 0 and 15 to 6. Again the winners had no trouble in vanquishing their opponents in a rather uninteresting contest.

Jones, Wilson

Stars of the winners were Buck Jones and Bob Wilson.

The Theta Chi and Delta volleyball "A" teams won by default from the Yeomen and Alpha hall while the Phi Psi "B" team won from the SAEs the same way.

Scribes Pick Grid Winners

Their guessing ability almost drained, the Emerald sports staff's corps of peerless pigskin prognosticators have confined their collective efforts to two football games and one basketball game this week, of all things.

Of major interest to Pacific coast conference fans is the Oregon - Oregon State traditional bash, scheduled for Corvallis' Bell field this afternoon. This game will bring together two ball clubs that have taken it on the chin from a number of other gridiron units this season.

Stanford-Cal

Berkeley's Memorial stadium will probably hold 60,000 screaming bleacherites today, that crowd assembling to see the Stanford-California game. In Corvallis, this morning the Emerald sports staff meets the Oregon State Barometer sports staff in a wild basketball game. Here's our predictions for the three affairs:

Oregon-Oregon State

Our thirteen seniors will have a glory ride, and generally spoil a Beaver Homecoming celebration. Oregon, but only by a touchdown. The game could be closer than this.

Stanford-California

The Indians are hotter than fourth of July firecrackers. Looks like the T-Party kids by 10 points or up.

Emerald-Barometer

We couldn't pick them, could we? Besides the editor says we must take an optimistic stand. . . . If they don't foul their way out, the Emerald gang by 6 points.
