Pamphlets Tell

From the pamphlet: "With few exceptions these aren't temporary war-time jobs, but professional positions offering long-time employment and advancement. The most numerous and often most spectacular war-time jobs are at sub-University level. Women equipped with talents and education for full professional responsibility have a patriotic duty to use them at the highest possible level."

It lists fields and jobs in which women now are able to work. More fully-trained people are needed, since the shortages are often acute.

Fields Listed

Fields of work rather than specific jobs are stressed, fields in which substantial although not always complete preparation may be had at the University. Only a few of hundreds of possible jobs are listed.

Professional specialists, e.g., accountants, architects, nurses, etc., must ordinarily major in a special field, but for many war jobs women are selected chiefly on a basis of character, personality, attitude, habits of work, and quality of performance of whatever has been done.
