

Good Taste
Misplaced

By MARY ANN CAMPBELL
Christmas greetings and a Happy Finals Week to all the optimistic souls who wandered about all term murmuring, "I'll get THAT done after Thanksgiving . . . I've lots of time!" Now the turkey festival has come and gone . . . whoosh . . . and here we are with finals hardly a week away. Extremely unnerving!

Then there was the girl who had been taking science courses all her life, and all of a sudden burst into the English department in her senior year because, as she explained, she didn't want to be so one-sided, which caused a passing professor to murmur, "What does she want to be . . . two-sided?"

The cast of "Watch on the Rhine" reports that their performance last Wednesday at a country crossroads went off like a breeze . . . The town consisted largely of a general store, a beer joint, and a grange hall, which was the theater for the evening. The audience had lots of children in it . . . as they had been warned there would be by wise Old Troupers. The feminine portion of the audience was most impressed with Jim Bronson, oh-ing and ah-ing for every entrance he made! The play was a big hit too. They are going to take the show on the road twice more before the end of the term. . . . Happy Exam Week, dear cast!!

Legend has it that the covered walk by Gerlinger is very popular with piggers these rainy evenings. . . . One couple who wandered over there for a few moments privacy found twelve other people had the same idea before them . . . the available space is rather limited and somebody said that Times Square has nothing on it for crowded conditions.

Now that the library has put up a ferocious sign in the reference room to eliminate seekers after knowledge who plan to bring their own books and not use the periodicals or look up references, the population in there has shrunk to term paper authors and editing students . . . We miss the boys in the reserves who used to spend Friday evenings there doing their math.

Didja ever think of using Hummel cards for Christmas cards?? Not only are they perfectly darling, but they don't have sentiments all over them which get a trifle boring after the fourteenth Christmas. . . .

Deepest sympathies to those who don't get to the bus station in time to get a seat on the bus . . . and to the people who have 3 to 5 Saturday exams . . . and to anybody who is going to catch a 3 a.m. train . . . and to the people who pack their trunks and put the keys at the bottom of the trunk . . . or who lock their bags and go off without the keys . . . and a special calla lily tied with a big purple satin ribbon to all poor sad cases who have three finals in one day.
