Good Taste Misplaced

The concerts in the browsing room seems a step in the general direction of Deems Taylor's definition of the ideal way to hear music. He wants large, comfortable chairs set a considerable distance apart, a beautifully-decorated room, and plenty of equipment for smoking and drink, very handy. And, of course, good music, well-played. The b.room plan is more practical, somehow, because any apparatus and cigarettes are bound to distract from the music. . . .

nabbed one basket as Willamette began to whittle away at the bulky Oregon lead.

From then on in, the Bearcat point tempo increased while Hobson's fellows canned one every so often just to maintain control of the affair.

With four minutes remaining, Runyan, Schmidt and friend Ragsdale, again, all connected to narrow matters to two points, 35 to 33, Hobby m ¼ n (ithe. — 33, Hobby inserted his starting quintet.

In desperation Willamette fouled and fouled again, endeavoring to nab the sphere and close the gap. Oregon responded by taking the ball out of bounds and toying with it much to the consternation of the clawing bearcat.

Kirsch Cans Foul

With some 20 seconds left, Captain Kirsch calmly cashed in on one of those fouls, by flicking through a free toss.

Oregon's attack-pattern was broken up many times when Hobson substituted freely in an effort to give his entire squad action.

Theta Chis Pick Queen

"Sweetheart of the Theta Chi Freshmen" is the honor to be bestowed on some lucky girl Friday night. The sweetheart will be picked from the dates the freshmen bring to the dinner and radio dance. According to Jack Gibson, freshman prexy, a large corsage will be awarded to the girl who, in the opinion of the five upper-class judges, is blessed with the greatest amount of pulchritude.

During intermission she will be presented to the guests, and will go through ceremonies prescribed to become the sweetheart. Only freshmen and pledges will bring dates to the dinner, but beginning at 9 all house members will dance to the music of the "Five Jacks," a group composed of fellows in the house.

against the French positions in Tunisia, but were thrown back after suffering considerable losses. Bad weather has held fighting in this area to a small scale in most cases although a Fighting French column moving toward the Mediterranean from Lake Chac has tangled with Axis troops near the coast. Should the column succeed in reaching the sea Rommel will find his way into Tunisia seriously impeded, and any stand he might make against the eighth army approaching from the east would be most uncomfortable with the French at his rear.

In the Pacific
Attention has been called to the Pacific by an Australian spokesman's statement that a huge Jap naval force is on the move. The source reports that this new contingent is larger than any yet amassed by the Nipponese and that it is moving in the direction of the southwest Pacific islands, the Solomons, New Guinea, possibly even Australia. The force is reportedly moving very cautiously and is widely dispersed to avoid the type of disaster dealt them previously by our navy and the air force.

With the Russians on the rampage, action in North Africa only awaiting more favorable weather, and a new thrust by the Japs in the Pacific impending, newspapers may have to figure out a new front page layout to handle all the news of the next few weeks.

gill and Micki Mitchell announcing theirs recently. She commented, "I think the most unique way of announcing an engagement . . . and this is the way I plan to do it if I'm ever engaged . . . is to ring the fire bell in the middle of the night and give everyone little firemen's hats."

The war marriage problem then came up, and M.A. commented emphatically, "I don't approve of them at all . . . you have so little time together."

About Hannah

When she first came to school, she thought Eugene was "much too small," having lived in Chicago, Dallas, and Houston, Texas, not counting Portland. "Then I bought my Model T and began to enjoy life. That was Hannah . . . I don't know where she is now." She added that it was "wicked fallacy . . . pure malicious fallacy" that Hannah ever had to be pushed, because "She had a self-starter that worked. We had to crank it sometimes, though."

Working down at the Oregon Lumber Sales, where "I do billing, filing, and am a general pack-of-all-trades," M.A. thinks it's wonderful. "I got a $10 bonus for Christmas, and I hadn't been working there very long, either." She hates housework.

Good Neighbor?

She also hates Spanish. She commented, briefly, expressively screwing up her face, "Ugh."

"Hot in here, isn't it?" she said, moving her feet quickly from the top of the radiator.

"My courses through school are absolutely the wierdest jumble you've ever seen . . . pre-law, math, French, music, drama . . . and I don't know what all."

Next Year

Next year's Panhellenic president "is going to have a very difficult problem to face," in M.A.'s opinion. She believes that there's going to be a complete reorganization of housing next year, with no personnel for houses, not so many upperclassmen, lots of freshman girls, and, of course, no men.

Concluded M.A., "I'm waiting for spring term politics. I just love it. I love to see the boys come over and try to talk the girls into this bloc and that one. I just adore it. I love to be stubborn."
