

Yearbook Hits First Deadline

In sending the living organization layouts for the Oregana to Portland Tuesday, the first major deadline has been met, J. Wesley Sullivan, editor of the Oregana, said Tuesday evening. This material amounts to one-fourth of the yearbook.

"Despite the fact that our deadlines have been set more than a month ahead because of the war effort," he said, "we were able to meet this deadline. The reason for this was the cooperation of the members, staff and the photographers."

The second color in the living organization section has already been printed. The colors will be burt orange for the women and dark green for the men.

Drawings of all the living organizations, were made by Jenelyn Gaston, sophomore in architecture and allied arts, are finished, have been sent to Portland, and the proofs are back. Jenelyn is now working on drawings of the buildigs in which the various schools are housed.

The school section which is the next deadline, is set for two weeks from now.

KORE Schedules Piano Program

Leone LaDuke and Phyllis Taylor, pianists, will present the program on the student series of recitals over KORE tonight from 7:30 to 8 p.m. Miss LaDuke will play Bach's Chromatic Fantasy and Fugut.

Miss Taylor will play "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" by Bach, arranged by Hess, "Spoon River" Ly Percy Grainger, the Nocturne in E major by Chopin, and the Waltz in F major by Chopin.

Physical Fitness Institute Starts State Tour Soon

The first of a series of 14 physical fitness institutes to be held in Oregon high schools will come to Eugene Thursday, according to Dr. Ralph W. Leighton, dean of the school of physical education.

The institutes will emphasize the importance of physical fitness in wartime, and the part the high school can play in this effort. The program will consist of informing those out of touch with modern methods of physical education.

The program was devised by the army, navy, and U.S. public health service, and is under sponsorship of the FSA and the office of education.

French Movie Films Masters

"Light and enjoyable" are the words Dr. Carl L. Johnson, assistant professor of romance languages, used to describe "Carnival in Flanders," a French sound movie to be shown Thursday, January 14, at 207 Chapman hall at 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Sponsored by the University French department, the picture portrays a Flemish village of 1616, with accurate details from prints of Rembrandt, Breughel, Hals, and Steen. For the film which lasts 95 minutes, an admission of 25 cents will be charged.

Topic Announced For Essay Contest

"The place of the University in a system of free government" has been chosen as the subject of the 1943 Philo Sherman Bennett essay contest open to all undergraduate students. Every year, under provisions of a trust established by Mr. Philo Sherman Bennett, prizes are awarded for the essays submitted on a subject pertaining to "the principles of free government."

For acceptable essays, the prizes offered this year are $35, first prize, and $15, second prize.

The contest is open to undergraduate students, and everyone participating in the contest must register with the chairman of the Philo Bennett committee, Dr. Waldo Schumacher. Two type-written copies of the essays must be submitted to the chairman of the committee by May 1, 1943. The essays should be about 5000 words.

Three Suspended On Drinking Charge

On a charge of drinking and disrupting student life, three students were suspended from the University for the remainder of the school year, W. A. Dahlberg, chairman of the discipline committee, announced this week.

The discipline committee also suspended two other students on the same charge, but suspended the penalty so long as the students maintain good behavior.

War Board Pushes

To these arguments, we sometimes remark, slyly to be sure, that clothes and uniforms properly hung will probably last longer. To that extent, the cost of the war will be a little less. What is of more immediate importance, the supply of cloth can be stretched a little longer, to the satisfaction of everyone.

Cordially,
CLAIR F. YOHE,
Chaplain.

Red Cross Bills Vital Problems

Red Cross activities in western Oregon will continue to form the topic of discussion this week for delegates from approximately 17 counties attending the meeting of the Red Cross institute, which began here Monday morning. Presiding at the convention is Miss Kathleen Somerville, administrative assistant from the Pacific Branch bank of San Francisco. Meetings will be held in the faculty room of Friendly hall.

Main topics for the convention, scheduled to last through Friday, January 16, are disaster relief, civilian war aid, chapter administration, and home service.

Central Topics

Opening at 9 a.m., discussion for Tuesday centered around civilian war aid, chapter administration, and disaster relief. Included in the list of speakers were Mrs. J. L. Manning, Red Cross national committee member; Mrs. Alice Maxwell, general field representative for the state of Oregon; and Miss Somerville, who spoke on chapter administration.

Speakers for today will be Mr. A. J. Hix, state first aid and water safety representative; and Miss Ethel Schureman, who will explain Gray Lady service.

Home Service Speaker

The discussion of home service is scheduled for Thursday and Friday meetings, with Miss Martha Godwin, state home service representative, as the main speaker.

According to Mrs. Genevieve Turnipseed, director of dormitories, arrangements have been made for men delegates to live on the third and fourth floors of Zeta hall, while women will occupy the first and second floors.

Tire Test Date Set

Owners of cars are required by law to have their tires inspected periodically. The time set for the first test has been lengthened from January 31 to March 31. "A" card holders will thereafter be required to have tires inspected once each six months.

cation of the class constitution are scheduled for the one meeting at 7:30 Thursday night in Villard hall. In past years elections followed nominations by one week. The plan to nominate and elect at one meeting was decided on at a meeting of the executive council last week.

The one night plan for nominations and elections is calculated to eliminate one week of political bickering and also insure greater attendance at the nominating assembly when freshmen will first hear and ratify their constitution.

an inspiration to his teammates.
3. He must have excelled athletically in his sport field or fields.
4. He must have a cumulative grade point average of a 2., or a C average. Any grade point superiority among candidates was to be ignored.
5. He must have self-reliance. If a player has earned his way through school, he would be considered above another candidate of otherwise equal ability.
According to plans Christianson outlined, "athletes of all sports, major and minor, shall be eligible for consideration." The only qualifications were those listed above.

Plenty Coffee, No Sugar Is Food Rationing Status

By ROSS YATES

"Coffee, yes, but alas! no sugar," seems to be the opinion of most of the fraternities on the University campus. Combative measures for the situation vary. Some offset the sugar shortage by cutting down on baking and buying more ready-baked goods. Several have made use of honey and molasses as substitutes.

One fraternity has adopted the use of saccarin for use in coffee instead of sugar. And since saccarin is many times sweeter than sugar, and also inexpensive, according to this fraternity, it has proved a success.

Internal Rationing

Internal rationing within the houses is common. Many houses allow their members only one teaspoonful of sugar on cereal and another in coffee. But in spite of all planning, a few of the houses ran out of sugar before the end of last term.

Self-rationing before regular rationing started last spring was used by one fraternity.

Sugar Scarce

Most houses find themselves cramped for sugar, only a few reporting "no trouble." Most houses find collecting ration cards difficult, which they trace to lack of cooperation on the part of the students.

Lack of coffee, it seems, has affected no one.

Comments on rationing cards to be issued for canned goods were vague. Few of the house managers, it appears, have given it much thought. One bluntly stated, "If they won't bring their cards, they don't eat." Others beginning to think about the situation, remarked that the new rationing would probably affect the menus quite a bit, as a good share of the food used in houses now comes from cans.

Some Say "Bad"

Pessimistic managers stated that the situation would be "pretty bad." Others, more optimistic, say that it would mean few luxuries, but that probably much the same fare as now would be served.

"The boys take it as a war effort and don't complain if everything isn't there," remarked one. Some, according to reports, have already been economizing.

Some of the houses have already stocked supplies of canned goods in preparation for the shortage. Most, however, have not. But reports show that food rationing will leave its mark on all fraternities on the campus, whether they are stocked or not.

A.P. Correspondent On Press meet Docket

"War and the Newspapers" will be the topic of the 25th Oregon Press conference when it meets January 22 and 23 on the University campus. Among speakers to be presented at this conference is Wendell Webb, Associated Press correspondent who covered the battle of Midway.

Problems of war prices, censorship, advertising, and rationing will be discussed by members of the conference. Round table discussions, reports, the semi-annual meeting of the Oregon Newspaper Publishers association, and the election of conference officers will take place.

Among those expected to attend are Robert Ormand Case, novelist and short story writer who has recently returned to journalism, Governor Earl Snell, retiring governor Charles A. Sprague, and F. F. Janney of the war price and rationing office in Portland.
