

Basketball's Here Tonight!!

Duck-UW Hoop Fued Boils

SIX DUCKS WITH ONE THOUGHT IN MIND . . .

. . . Beating Washington's Huskies tonight and Saturday has become the prime object in life for these half-dozen Webfoots, all of whom are certain to see service. Oregon Quint Primed For Tonight's Contest

Igloo Scene of Hoop Flare-up: 8 O'clock

By FRED BECKWITH

Basketball action reaches a zenith tonight when the Washington Huskies square off against our Ducks at 8 p.m. in McArthur Court. The first of a two-game weekend series finds varsity coach Howard "Hobby" Hobson's league-leading northern division basketballers facing Hec Edmunson's platinum-plated Husky five.

Despite Washington claims of superiority, Hobson, on the eve of the court war, stated that he was "conceding nothing."

"We have as good a chance to win as they have. If the Huskies don't turn in a better brand of ball against us than they showed in the Oregon State series, they're in for an evening of trouble."

Oregon will floor the same starting five men who have performed in the past five games:

Bob Wren and Warren Taylor, forwards; Roger Wiley, center; Bob Newland and Captain Don Kirsch, guards.

Subs to Show

Certain to see plenty of action are the following trio of melon-tossers: Al Popick, Roy Seeborg, and Rolph Fuhrman. Hobson was well pleased with the work of his subs on the recent Inland Empire trip, in which the Ducks bagged three conference wins out of a possible four games.

The Huskies, noted for their fast breaking offensive style of play will use a veteran-loaded quintet, including the following men: Ford and Gilbertson, forwards; Gilmur, center; Morris and Leask, guards. Chuck Gilmur and Doug Ford will bear the brunt of the attacking purple and gold forces.

Tradition favors Oregon as the Ducks do not often lose to the Huskies in their own Eugene locale.

Cage boss Hobson opined that Washington State, whom Oregon split with last week, is every bit as good a ball club, "and a definite shade faster."

Tonight's game will have important bearing on the conference standings. Should Oregon split with the Huskies, they would retain their hold on first place, but if Washington snares two wins from the green and gold basket tossers, the positions of the two teams will be reversed.

"Hobby" has seen every five in the conference in action. And although he considers the season to be very young, he thinks that four of the five clubs are capable of emerging victorious in the coveted first place throne.

Only Idaho does not, at this date, appear to have a look-in on a slice of championship cake. "The Vandals, however," mused Hobson, "are capable of upsetting the apple cart of every team in the loop. And don't be surprised if they kick the dope bucket over more than once."

The Oregon cage mentor openly regards with amusement any odds that heavily favor the Washingtonians tonight.

He describes his outfit as in an "uncertain stage."

"The younger boys are coming along fine. When the lettermen veterans hit their peak, we'll be hard to stop."

It is entirely possible that Hobson's prediction may come true on the pinewoods tonight. Washington State learned that Oregon was not a group of young men in shorts to be taken lightly.

Tonight will mark the local citizenry's first opportunity to view

Wiley Heads ND Scorers

Oregon's freshman center, Roger Wiley, leads the ND scorers at the conclusion of the first week of play with a total of 39 points in four games, statistics reveal.

Wiley is high man, but in the matter of game averages he must take a back seat to Don Durdan, Oregon State's indispensable man of sports. The Beaver backcourt start has flipped in 29 points in two games—a 14.5 average.

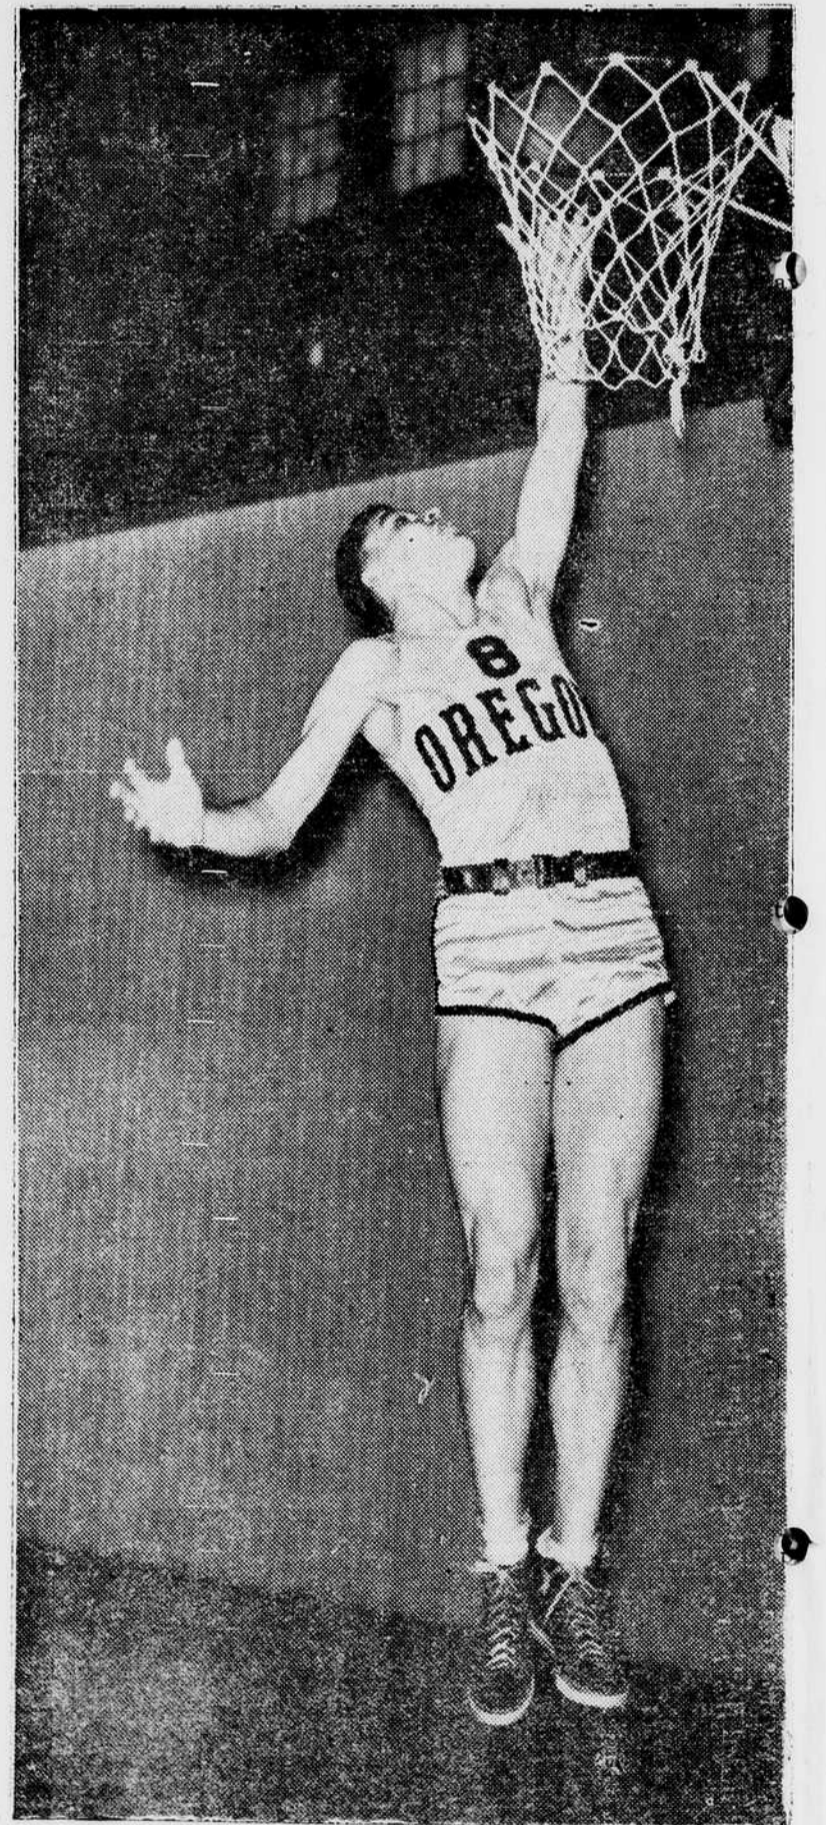

Third place falls to Warren Taylor, another Duck, with 26 markers to his credit. A two-way tie is evident for fourth with Bob Newland, Oregon, and Gail Bishop, Washington State, both with 24. Bishop's, however, came in two games, Newland's in four.

The top ten scorers:

Wiley, Oregon	15	9	39
Durdan, OSC	10	9	29
Taylor, Oregon	8	10	26
Bishop, WSC	10	4	24

A good crowd of students and townspeople is expected to be on hand when the whistle to "play ball!" is blown.

Medical Test Still Set

Medical aptitude test will be given today at 2 p.m. in Villard assembly hall even if classes are not being held, H. E. Yocom, head of the biology department, declared Thursday night.

Since the test is national it must be given today, he announced, remarking that only lack of heat or light would postpone the quiz.

"All pre-medical men students are expected to take the test today," he emphasized.
