Below the regular Sunday services in Eugene churches are listed for "regular" church goers. Needless to say, those students who don't go are those who won't go—so no amount of editorializing on the part of a so-called church editor would be beneficial...

Mrs. Paul B. Means will be the guest speaker at a combined meeting of the four youth groups. The topic about which Mrs. Means will speak is "In Spite of Everything." At 7:30 Captain Lloyd V. Hammond, post chaplain at Camp Adair, will speak on "How We Can Help Our Men in the Service."

Rev. Remington Arrives Monday

Rev. William P. Remington, Episcopal bishop of the Eastern Oregon district, will be on the campus for a week, arriving here Monday, January 25.

His program will include meetings with various groups for luncheon, dinners, and firesides. On Thursday he will be the guest speaker for the YWCA assembly, and Wednesday morning he will be guest of the Episcopal students for breakfast in Gerlinger hall.

Meditation

On Sunday afternoon, January 31, he will conduct a meditation at the University vesper service in the music building. Later in the evening there will be a supper and fireside in the Episcopal parish house.

Bishop Remington attended the University of Pennsylvania, where he was on the track team for four years. He represented the United States in the second Olympic games, which were held in Paris in 1900.

Personal Conferences

Bishop Remington is a trustee of Whitman college, and of the University of Pennsylvania, and holds honorary degrees from the Virginia theological seminary and the University of Pennsylvania.

Each afternoon Monday through Friday, Bishop Remington will be in the men's lounge of Gerlinger from 3 to 4 to meet students informally. Appointments for personal conferences and other engagements may be made through Karl W. Onthank, dean of personnel.

Marines Advance Ex-Football Star

One of the University of Oregon's outstanding football players for three years, Robert Clarence Boyd, has just received his commission as a second lieutenant in the United States marine corps.

The former Duck griddier is now at Quantico, Virginia, undergoing a three months' course in advanced military tactics and strategy.

Officers' Training

Upon successful completion of that course he will either be sent to duty with a leatherneck outfit or to a specialist school for advanced training in some type of weapon.

Lieut. Boyd, whose home is in Eugene, enlisted as a private following his graduation and served two months before going to officers' training school. He earned his commission after ten weeks training.

Boyd graduated from here last June with a B.S. degree, majoring in physical education.

Violin Class Will Play At Professor's Home

The violin class of Rex Underwood, professor of music at the University, will meet Monday night, January 25, at Professor Underwood's home, at 1038 East 21st street for a private recital. All violin students are expected to attend. Other students interested are welcome.

Violin students who will play are as follows: John Cole, who will play the Mendelssohn concerto, movements two and three; Joyce Durham and Marion Saltness, who will play Bach's concerto for two violins, movements one and two; Genevieve Graves, who will play Handel's sonata in D major; William Baird, playing Schubert's "Ave Maria;" Shirley Hatfield, who will play the first movement to Mozart's concerto in D major;

UO Enjoys Fine Music

By ROSS YATES

A program of classical music to which students are willing to listen with ardor and come back the next week for more is amazing, according to Dr. Theodore Kratt, dean of the school of music.

Classical music, Dr. Kratt implied, has long been something to which University students seem averse. And that students should gather to hear music—rather than to gossip, read books, or go to sleep—he claims is remarkable.

Sunday Concerts

The series of Mu Phi Epsilon recorded concerts, to which Dr. Kratt referred, was inaugurated this term in the browsing room of the University library. Concerts are held every Sunday afternoon from 4 to 4:45 p.m.

"It shows that students are finding room for cultural improvement," declared Dr. Kratt. "I don't now of anything like it on the Pacific coast."

California Attendance

Dr. Kratt recalled attending a recorded concert at the University of California at which only 30 students were present out of an enrollment of thousands.

To the suggestion that in the future the concerts might be followed by a few numbers played by members of the University school of music, Dr. Kratt exclaimed, "It would be better than recitals."

Recital Solution

He pointed out that often students play long recitals in the music auditorium to a handful of people, whereas if they could play a short time before the crowds which every Sunday attend the browsing room concerts, they would be much more benefited.

The concert to be presented this coming Sunday at 4 p.m. will be the fourth in the series, which is sponsored by the Mu Phi Epsilon patroness group. John Stehn, director of the University band, will be in charge. As usual, a request box will be placed in the room to receive student requests for future programs.

Karsten Ohnstad, blind author of "The World at My Fingertips," is a graduate of St. Olaf college, Northfield, Minn.

and Rex John Underwood, playing Paganini's Caprice number 13 and Wieniawski's "Souvenir de Moscow."

UO Grad Assigned To Study Japanese

Donald Castanien, former graduate research assistant in the department of Romance languages in 1940, was recently promoted to attend the University of Colorado as a student of the Japanese language according to word received here by Dr. Leavitt O. Wright, professor of Romance languages.

Castanien, who was a member of the Senior Six while here on the campus, has been stationed with the U. S. naval reserve at Farragut, Idaho, where he received his first class seaman rating prior to his appointment to the University of Colorado. According to Dr. Wright, this appointment will place him in position for a commission as an ensign in the navy.

A member of Phi Beta, national music honor society; Delta Phi, French honor society, of which he was secretary-treasurer, and president of Sigma Delta Pi, Spanish honor society, while he was on the campus, Castanien became a graduate assistant during his senior year.

Hep Scholars Dig New Quiz

Words such as "screw ball," "oomph," "jalopy," "stooge," "brunch," and "neoprene," were included in a definition test which George Turnbull, professor of journalism, sprang on his unsuspecting elementary journalism class in an effort to class students into modern, progressive, conservative, and Victorian groups.

The test, which was made up by the Winston Dictionary company, includes 25 modern words in common use today.

Most Students "Moderns"

According to Professor Turnbull, students on the average scored 80 out of a possible 100 points, classing them in the progressive group.

Out of a class of 30, eight students defined most of the words and were thus grouped as "moderns;" 14, who didn't know quite so many, were classed as progressives; six, who didn't seem to be up on modern expressions, were classed as conservatives; and the remaining two fell into the Victorian group.

Novel Quiz

Most incorrectly defined words were "lucite," and "neoprene," while "screwball," "stooge," "heil," and "blackout" couldn't be missed.

Just because some students were classed as Victorians because they might not have known the meaning of "hair-do," "dither," "sulphapyridine," or "ersatz," didn't indicate that the novel quiz should be taken seriously—they might be just as modern as the "moderns," it was pointed out.
