Mr. Webb said, "I do not think there is anything in the line of big news that is being delayed." He expressed an "intense and sincere admiration for the men in the army and navy."

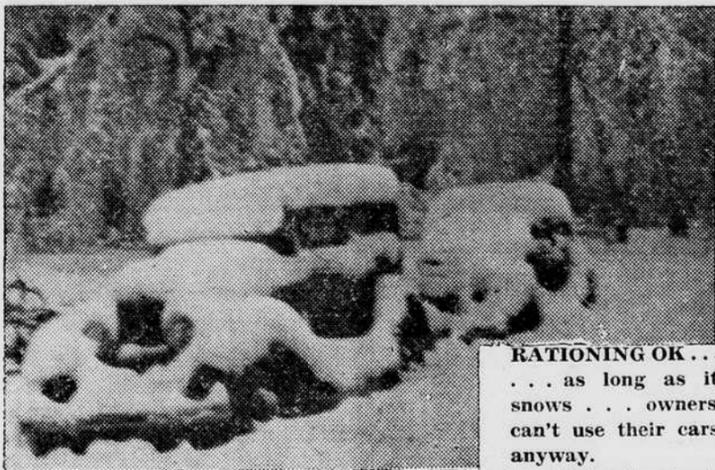

Mr. Webb described Hawaii, pointing out that it was dangerous to walk on the streets of Honolulu at night, that people lurked in doorways—that you'd hear a gun click behind you as you walked along.

He watched the sinking of the airplane carrier Yorktown, and declared that every Japanese plane sent out in the attack was shot down.

As to reporting of actual war conditions in the Pacific area, Mr. Webb said, "I think you are getting a clear and true picture out of that part of the war."

Charles D. Jarrett, of the soil conservation service in Portland, addressed the morning session of the conference on "Editors as Conservationists." A round table discussion followed on the difficulty of wartime publication. A round table discussion followed on the difficulty of wartime publication.

Dr. Donald E. Erb, president of the University, spoke in the afternoon session on "Higher Education Meets the Challenge of the War." Lt. George H. Godfrey, former head of the University of Oregon News Bureau and now in the intelligence office at Camp Adair, spoke on "The picked in each girls' living organization to announce the dance during dinner, according to Inez Potwin, publicity chairman.

Class Goal

"The goal for the class this year," Doeneka said last night, "will be especially to give the members confidence in later years—a feeling of 'I went to Oregon—class of '46.' This is our main reason for getting off to a good start with the dance tonight. We eventually hope to attain and maintain the spirit evident in class organizations at other colleges on the coast."

Patrons and patronesses for the dance include:

Dr. and Mrs. J. C. McCloskey, Dr. and Mrs. R. B. Huber and friends.

Don Hunter, University technician, will provide the public address system and the coat checking concession will be handled by Dave Jahn.

Band Attracts Rooters Gaze 'Eve' Prepares For 4-Day Run

Something new had been added last night, basketball fans discovered when they sighted four coeds playing in the University band which in the past has been strictly masculine.

Clad in the regular band coats, the four girls played the French horn, snare drum, bass clarinet, and clarinet. Nevena Delloff, Margie Robinson, Margie Fulsom, and Aleanor Patterson were the girls who broke the tradition of only men appearing in the band at any athletic contest held at the University.

More girls are expected to appear tonight, John Stehn, director of the band, said after Friday night's game. Girls were asked to turn out for the games this term because of the growing lack of men.

In the past, girls have asked to play, but out of "orneriness" the director said, he has not permitted them to participate in the musical program at games.

Next year it will be an all-girl band or nothing, Stehn claims. University of Washington is now also using girls in the band at athletic meets.

Alumni office of the University of Wisconsin now has on file the records of approximately 108,000 alumni.

Students of Flora Stone Mather college, Western Reserve university, distinguished themselves as farmerettes in the recent potato harvest.

Written especially for production by college drama students and other amateur groups is Maxwell Anderson's "The Eve of St. Mark," scheduled to open at the University Theater January 27 for a four-day run.

Not only has Anderson's play been a success in nearly 50 colleges and universities, but it has also been presented on Broadway.

Anderson wrote the play in cooperation with the National Theater conference, an organization of collegiate drama groups formed of interest leading playwrights in writing plays for amateur production.

Until the formation of the organization, only typical Broadway shows were available for amateur groups. These were often unsuitable. This year the group asked Anderson to write the play, which is a comedy of modern youth in war, and it was so well received that he was asked to present it on Broadway.

The first play to be written for amateurs was "Jim Dandy" by William Saroyan, which was offered last year.

As a result of the formation of the National Theater conference, colleges are able for the first time to present a play when it is running on Broadway and also for the first time audiences outside of New York may see a current Broadway hit.

Tulane university is in its 109th session.

The "T-Zone"

where cigarettes are judged

The "T-ZONE"—Taste and Throat—is the proving ground for cigarettes. Only your taste and throat can decide which cigarette tastes best to you...and how it affects your throat. For your taste and throat are individual to you. Based on the experience of millions of smokers, we believe Camels will suit your "T-ZONE" to a "T." Prove it for yourself!
