

Oregon to Emphasize Speed Against League Leaders

By FRED TREADGOLD

Speed basketball with that extra zip, dripped onto the well-scuffed wood of Washington's hoop pavilion tonight in Seattle, when the loop-topping Huskies and Oregon's third place Ducks resume their casaba squabble.

When the 8 p.m. tipoff wings skyward in the mammoth Seattle basketball barn, Washington will be stubbornly clutching their coveted first place position. The men of Howard Hobson have a different approach toward the same end. Success in the two-game series will rejuvenate the Webfoots' hopes for the league bunting.

The Huskymen of Hec Edmundson are odds-on favorites in this third game of Washington-Oregon hoop relations.

Mentor Hobson saw his Green and Yellow pupils register early leads here a week ago, only to fold in the stretch. This inability to stay ahead once they were in front was laid to a two-fold reason:

(1) Lack of steadiness by a green freshman-sprinkled outfit when the game began to tighten up in the fleeting seconds, and,

(2) The departure of Warren Taylor, two-year veteran, a big boom in both the Duck offensive and defensive systems, with four foul perpetrations.

The past week hasn't been one of remorse and melancholy second-guessing by the Webfoots. There was little time to consider anything else but the Washington games at hand.

Consequently a lot of valuable practice-hours have been wiled away under the giant steel girders of the Igloo.

Blinding speed and shooting perfection, a dose which the Ducks received an overabundance of this week in drills, is the formula that Hobson hopes will bring victory Oregon's way.

Scoring Forward

The brunt of the scoring assault for Oregon will probably fall the way of Rolph Fuhrman, fast-developing senior forward; Warren Taylor, his forecourt

Frosh to Tangle With Rooks; Battle Tonight in Igloo; Second Game of 'Civil War'

Coach Sandy Sandness's Duckling proteges go up on the block tonight before the home town folks, when they try to avenge Wednesday evening's drubbing the Oregon State Rooks dealt them in Corvallis. This second feature of the "Little Civil War" will bring a touted group of Orange juniors to McArthur court for the contest which is slated to start at 7:30.

If one were inclined to be pessimistic about the rout that seemingly took place in the Beaver corral the other night, he should look back in last year's files, and take a look at the shellacking the Frosh received in the first of the year tilt. Then a few nights later, they returned with the scalps of an entire Rook roster hanging on their pennant.

Rook Roelandt

Probably the biggest reason the Rooks looked so well coordinated or "all fired" good the other evening, was because of one "crew-clipped" youngster, Frankie Roelandt, who had an, Frankie when he just couldn't miss the basket. His teammates knew their energetic guard was "on" too, for they continually flipped him the casaba, and he put it in with a hard-to-beat accuracy.

Kenny Hume of the Frosh was going "al lout" for points, when he was suddenly cut short with four penalties called on him in the second period. Up to the time of his expulsion, he was more than running with an even clip alongside aforesaid Roelandt.

Friday night will see a vastly different team of Ducklings take the court, as far as experience counts, for the heat is now up with our Yearlings and they will probably make use of their talents which were so submerged two nights ago.

Yeomen Bees went into the quarter finals of the intramural basketball league when they subdued the Chi Psi quintet 33-12. It was the winners' third straight victory and insured for them a place in the playoff spot, their only other game being a bye.

With Williams, Sabin and Speck hitting the hoop from all angles the independents came from behind to take a 16-3 bulge at half time, their substitutes playing most of the second half. The lodge men could not seem to control the ball off the backboards, this being a major factor in their one-sided loss.

Sigma Nu pulled another close game out of the fire by shading a fighting Beta "B" crew 21-18. Enjoying a halftime lead of five points they suddenly lost control of the ball game and the Betas bounced back into the running only to lose out at the last moment on a foul shot and field goal, never quite catching the snakemen.

Nu Mieule continued his scoring pace, canning 8 points, closely followed by teammate Wright with 6. Rathbun and Crawford each made 6 apiece for the losers.

Other "B" league action found Theta Chi turning on the heat to subdue a fighting Fiji outfit 19-8 in a rough and rugged ball game. It was a close battle until the last moment when a flurry of hilltop men baskets decided the outcome. Gallagher of Theta Chi was high point man making 8 points with Treadgold of the Fijis leading his team with four.

The Phi Delts, although hard put by the Pi Kaps, took a close 8-6 victory to keep on the win wagon. In a game that at times

The losers held the lead most of the way but seemed unable to solve the stellar play of substitute Wright who canned four points in the last half to put the game on ice.

Alpha Hall hurdled Sigma Hall

in the last game of the day in the "B" battle of the independents, 13-5. Ahead all the way, mainly through the efforts of McCallen and Campbell they showed power in annexing a win.

A mix-up in the schedule caused the DU-Sigma Hall "A" league game to be called for tomorrow. The game had been scheduled twice on the program.
