

'Allies Will Beat Japs', Mr. Shepherd Predicts

By BETTY LU SIEGMAN

Li, I, lien, and chih, the four great principles of China, are the basis of the Chinese philosophy of state taught by Confucianism and practised by Generalissimo Chiang-Kai-Chek, according to Rev. George W. Shepherd, special advisor on the Chinese New Life movement, who spoke to the ASUO Thursday.

"China and the United Nations will win this war against Japan," Rev. Shepard said, in explaining that battle is largely a matter of principle.

Fundamental Principles

Even though Japan started preparing 43 years ago, they can't win, because they started on the wrong principle, the concept of corruption. As long as the united nations stick to the principle that all men are equal, they will win, the Reverend maintained.

He emphasized the Generalissimo's own words, "In times of peril don't experiment, but go back to the fundamental principles." He added that this is why the great leader's people believe in him.

Most Important

"The practice of li, first cornerstone of ancient China and upon which Chiang Kai-Shek is building a new China, means human relations or the way human beings behave toward one another. It is the most important thing in the world," said Rev. Shepard.

According to him, the second great principle, I, which means social justice, expresses what is inside man and his attitude toward life as well as toward others. He added that God, being just and impartial, is really I, the highest expression of life.

Die for Honor

Lien, the third cornerstone, means plain honesty, sincerity, and truth. Stressing the words of the common people of China, "We have always known that honesty is lien, but have just been waiting for some big man to say it," the reverend added, "This is what makes life worth while."

Chih means self respect and also represents honor, which the Chinese stand for and for which they will fight and die.

Studies Classics

He gave a sketch of the generalissimo's life from the age of four when he began his study of the classics, volumes of philosophy on the accumulated wisdom of China for 4000 years, to the present time when he is beginning the third battle of his life at 56 years of age.

He stressed the importance of Chiang Kai-Shek's conversion into the Christian faith and his joining of the Southern Methodist church after his prospective mother-in-law had flatly denied that he could marry her daughter because he was not a Christian.

In Japanese Army

For two years he studied the Bible and supplemented this with a correspondence course from Madame Chiang's mother.

When he was 17, and had completed his study of the classics, the generalissimo went to Shanghai. After two years he made the second great decision of his life, to follow a military career. While following this path he was actually an officer in the Japanese army for two years.

Three Battles

When he came home from Japan he began his first great battle, which was with the war lords. This was won, resulting in the establishment of the national government of China.

The second battle was with the revolutionary group which believed in class warfare and hatred. It was just completed when the Japs struck again, resulting in the present war which we are now engaged in, marking the third battle of the general.

Girl Swimmers Ready For Intramural Meet

An intramural swimming meet sponsored by the Women's Athletic association will be held on the evenings of February 3, 10 and 17 at 7:30 p.m., according to Miss Milo Woodward, chairman of the event.

Rules and blanks have been distributed and girls who are interested are asked to read and fill out the blanks for acceptance by Miss Helen Petroskey in Gerlinger hall or Miss Woodward at Hendricks hall not later than February 1 at 5 p.m.

A mysterious "lame duck" team is to be entered. Girls who are interested are instructed to see Miss Woodward by the first of February.

Nurses' Aid Classes In Prospect for Coeds

Because of special interest shown by the University women in a nurses' aid program, an instructor has been obtained for classes to be held Tuesday and Thursday evenings in the P.E. building.

These classes will be held only if enough girls are interested in taking the course. If interested, girls are requested to call Red Cross headquarters, University extension 225 to arrange a date for interview with Mrs. Carl Phetteplace, chairman of the nurses' aide corps. The starting date for the classes will be announced later.

Girls at Western college, Oxford, Ohio, have turned their swimming pool over to sailors from the nearby naval training station for two evenings a week.

Footlights Dim Two More Times

Full-house performances Wednesday and Thursday will be followed by two more showings of Maxwell Anderson's impressive drama, "The Eve of St. Mark," playing Wednesday through Saturday in the University theater, Johnson hall.

Approximately 20 seats remain for the Friday performance, according to box office reports, and tickets for Saturday are announced as "going fast." Priced at 55 cents, tax included, tickets will be sold in Johnson hall Friday and Saturday from 10-12 m., and from 1-5 p.m. Reservations may also be made by calling 3300, extension 216. Performances will begin at 8 o'clock both evenings.

Settings are arranged against a background of black curtains, and the entire second act, played with a minimum of lighting, adds to the realism of the story. Touches of comedy throughout the play serve to lighten even the most dramatic moments.

Settings for the twelve different scenes were planned by Mr. Robinson's set design class, among most impressive backgrounds being the Bataan cave scene, designed by Kay Richards.

Contribution Deadline Set for Student Show

A "last call for talent" is now under way for "Odeon," show for creative students on the campus, according to W. A. Dahlberg, acting director of speech and dramatic arts. Deadline for all contributions except art work is February 1, and all art will be due Wednesday, February 3.

Creative fields open for contributions are literature, drama, radio, modern dance, art and music. All students with anything to offer are asked to see Mr. Dahlberg at Friendly hall before the end of this week.

Displays Set

The talent show will be held February 22 at 8 p.m. in Gerlinger hall. Student chairman for Odeon is Barbara Hampson, sophomore in journalism.

Contributions in literature may include essays, poems, short stories, sketches, or editorials, and should be given to R. D. Horn, associate professor of English, in Friendly hall. Drama, interpretive reading, and stage sets will be in charge of Mrs. Ottilie Seybolt, associate professor of speech and dramatic arts.

Displays of painting, sculpture, architecture, ceramics, and weaving will be arranged by Victoria Avakian, associate professor of

Quentin Earl, '42 Earns Gold Bars

Following in the footsteps of a number of other University graduates, Quentin V. Earl, '42, has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the United States marine corps.

A business administration major and a member of Kappa Sigma here, he won his gold bars with the leathernecks at Quantico, Virginia, by successfully completing a rigorous 10-week basic course for officer candidates.

Further Instruction

He is now in attendance at reserve officers' class at Quantico, where he will receive an additional three months of instruction in the principles of command.

Assignment to a combat unit for further training in the field or study in a specialists' school will climax Lieut. Earl's career at the Virginia base.

He was registered at the University from Portland.

applied design, Andrew Vincent, professor of drawing and painting, Merlin Dow and Edith Onthank. Kenneth Wood will be in charge of the radio show; Miss Helen Petroskey of the dance; and George Hopkins of the music.
