Choral Union Slated to Sing In Greater Artist Production

Selections from "King Arthur," by Purcell, choral fantasia from "Tannhauser" by Wagner and "America" by Ernest Bloch will compose the third in the University of Oregon's Greater Artist series sung by the choral union under the direction of Dr. Theodore Kratt, dean of the school of music. The concert will be held in McArthur court on March 1.

Managers To Obtain Second Ration Books

Visions of several thousand students flooding Eugene public schools to exchange their empty ration books for new ones has persuaded the local ration board to make a special provision for University students. According to a bulletin released last night, house managers may exchange books for members of their respective houses provided they bring along an inventory of canned goods which the house has on hand.

Registration for war ration book number two will begin Monday and continue throughout next week. House managers should take a complete inventory of all canned goods on hand and present this list when turning in the old books. The listing should not include milk, meat, fish, or cans of less than eight ounces.

Students who do not have book one in their possession must write home for and get it before they can obtain book number two.

Romantic Note

Why must the moon
Keep the landscape transposed
Into all of the things
Of which dreams are composed
When finals are near
And the weekend is closed?

Free Tickets Now Ready For Everyone

By TED GOODWIN

The term Odeon has been bandied about the campus for several days now with little clear information on the subject except that it will be a creative arts show this coming Monday and the name is pronounced Odayon.

Barbara Hampson, student chairman of a joint committee including faculty members headed by W. A. Dahlberg, speech instructor, emphasized several pertinent points.

Odeon is free to the public. This means that there will be no charge for admittance, but tickets will be required. These tickets may be obtained at the Co-op Monday from 10 to 12 and from 2 to 5 at no charge. Each ticket will admit two persons but any one person may obtain only one ticket, that is, no tickets by proxy, Miss Hampson pointed out.

Since Odeon will deal with creative endeavor in the fields of music, art, drama, letters and designing, it was rumored that any such talent display of the "finer things of life," would be limited to the "elite," whatever that is.

This is definitely not the case, Miss Hampson declared. The en-

UO Enrollment Drops As Men Go Off to War

By EDITH NEWTON

"Military" is the curt word that appears on the slip of paper in the registrar's office that tells the reason for the withdrawal of 63 men from the University this term. Each one of these men has quit school to go into some branch of the armed service.

Houses Compete In Tin Can Drive

The weekly scrap drive will definitely take place Friday Marge Curtis and Art Damschen, co-chairmen of the salvage committee stated Thursday.

Tin cans are the only items to be picked up, so that living organizations can concentrate on getting as much as possible. They are urged to solicit their neighbors for the cans.

Protect From Weather

The cans are to be flattened and the labels removed. They should be placed in a covered box with the name of the organization on the outside.

The boxes are to be placed on the front porches of the living organization, so that they can

Beverly Padgham Wins YW, Janet Ross Tops WAA Vote

Marilyn Campbell, AWS president; Janet Ross, WAA president; and Beverly Padgham, YWCA president, were elected heads of the three major women's organizations on the campus when University coeds met Thursday at 11 a.m. in Gerlinger hall to vote for their new 1943-44 officers.

Mrs. Herring to Meet Prospective WAACs

Any girl interested in joining the WAACs may see Mrs. Betty Herring, recruiting agent, at the dean of women's office Friday or Monday afternoon. Appointments should be made through the dean of women's office. Mrs. Herring will not come to the campus unless appointments are made.

Army Offers Many Jobs In WAACs

By ANNE CRAVEN

Girls 21 years old or who will be 21 by the end of the school year or during the summer, are being urged to join the WAAC reserve corps, Mrs. Betty Herring, WAAC recruiting officer, said Thursday. These girls, on joining the WAAC reserve corps, are then allowed to finish their school year before taking basic training.

"Do not close the doors to education as you walk off this campus," Mrs. Herring said. "Instead, join the WAACs and specialize in the thing you are most interested in."

'Beaux' Bazaar Set for Tonight

The Beaux Arts bazaar is not limited to concessions, stressed Don Hoffman, chairman of the tonight's art school ball. This year's version of the traditional Bozarts ball will retain most of the old-time flavor, he promised, with dancing, costumes, and other typical features with the bazaar attractions as an innovation.

Camouflaged for the occasion, the drafting room will be the scene of festivities from 8 to 11:30 tonight. Art school students will also be camouflaged for the event in costumes of their own design and daring, the committee pointed out.

Medium of exchange for all the concessions will be art school currency issued at the door. Games of chance and a food bar are promised. Main attraction will still be dancing.

An extra on the entertainment program will be square dancing called by Andrew M. Vincent, professor of drawing and painting.

Grand prizes for the most ingeniously dressed faculty member and student will be presented during the evening.

Tickets are on sale at the art school coop and librarian's office. They are 25 cents for members of the Allied Art league who have paid their dues and 50 cents for everyone else.

All students who have classes in the art school are invited to the bazaar.
