

Sing Program Takes Shape Entries Due

Drawings for order on the all-campus sing program will be made as soon as the entries are in, according to Oge Young, sing chairman.

The deadline was announced last week as Tuesday, April 6, a day also noteworthy as "M" day for the ERC. Entries must be in the Emerald news room or turned in to Ted Goodwin by 5 p.m. today.

Information should include the name of the house, the song, the song leader, and the number in the chorus. The competition for men limits choruses to from 10 to 18. Women may have from 16 to 20. Songs chosen must be only one song, or if a medley, should be sung through without stopping.

The sing will be held Friday, April 30, in McArthur court following the coronation of the Junior Weekeend queen and her court. The drawing will determine order of competition. Admission will be 40 cents and tickets may be purchased at the educational activities office in McArthur court.

Music Students Air KOAC Concert

Frances Brobert, soprano and sophomore in music, will be accompanied by Betty Bennett, freshman in music, when she presents a program of songs over KOAC at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday. Her program will include: "The Wren," by Benedict; "Obstination," by Foutenaille; "Song of India," by Rimsky-Korsakov; "Les Berceaux," Faure, and "The Lass With the Delicate Air."

On Wednesday evening at 7:30 Jean Phillips, sophomore in music, will play Chopin's Nocturne in D flat; Bach's Prelude and Fugue in D minor, and the first movement of Beethoven's "Sonata in G minor."

At 7:45 p.m. Ruth Baker, senior in music and pianist, will play Prelude and Fugue in B Flat, by Bach; "The Spinner" by Roff, and "Etude de Concert" by MacDowell.

Zino Francescatti Ends Greater Artist Concerts

By BETTY LU SIEGMAN

Closing the University's Greater Artist concert series for 1942-43, Zino Francescatti, French violinist, will play before an audience in McArthur court Thursday at 8 p.m.

The career of this artist includes the following steps—at five he made his first public appearance, at ten he scored a musical triumph in the Beethoven concerta, and at twenty established himself among the few really great violinists through the success of his formal debut with the Orchestra of the Concerts de Conservatoire at the Paris opera.

His second debut was the beginning of his career in Europe, followed by similar successes in South America. In the fall of 1939 Francescatti came to the United States for the first time.

Three Orchestras

In the course of a limited but sold-out tour he appeared with three of America's most important orchestras—the New York Philharmonic symphony, the Chicago symphony and the Cincinnati symphony—each of which immediately re-engaged him for the following season.

After this first tour of the United States he was hailed in the press as being "worthy of the mantle of Paganini."

Francescatti's 1941-42 tour was sold out the preceding spring. It included an appearance, his third in as many years, with the New York Philharmonic symphony as one of four major violinists to appear during the centennial year of America's oldest orchestra.

The other violinists chosen for this honor were Menuhin, Heifetz, and Busch.

Third Appearance

During this season Francescatti also makes his third consecutive appearance with the Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, and Rochester orchestras as well as appearances with the San Francisco, Toledo, and Tri-City symphonies.

Francescatti, who began to play the violin when he was but three years old, grew up self-taught in music, except for the

All ERC men will report to McArthur court this afternoon at 4 to receive their orders, Dr. Carl F. Kossack said Monday. They are not to bring their suitcases at that time as they will have an opportunity to pick them up later.

training he received from his father in both violin and piano.

Parents Musicians

Both his parents were musicians, but his father felt that his young son, Zino, shouldn't have a musician's career, because it was too precarious. He wanted him to become a lawyer.

It was Zino's mother who saw to it that he developed his musical talent even though she agreed to his becoming a lawyer, and it was Francescatti, himself, who later made the decision that he was going to become a musician.

Shades of Sky Blue! Sky Scanners Sought

Wanna be a sky gazer? This question was brought up by Associated College Press when they revealed that 1,000 sky-gazers are wanted by Hans H. Uewberger, assistant professor of meteorology at Pennsylvania State college. He is planning to use the student gazers to estimate the shade of the blue sky.

He expects to find out whether the eyes of the average untrained person can be used as a measuring stick in this type of meteorological study. The aerologist explained that if the large majority of untrained students can agree on the shade of sky blue during simultaneous observations, the usefulness of color estimation would be established.

Roseburg Speakers Win Annual Debate Contest

By CAROL COOK

Roseburg high school's affirmative debate team won first place in the annual state high school speech and forensic tournament. Jack Horn and Barney Baker argued the winning case. Hillsboro, the runner up, was represented in the negative by Orville Meyer and LaRoy Dillan.

Having won first place in the contest for three consecutive years, the champions will take permanent possession of the trophy, which was presented by Dr. E. E. DeCou, University professor of mathematics. It was Dr. DeCou who organized the first tournament.

Nevitt Smith Wins

Winners in the after dinner speaking contest were Nevitt Smith, first, Salem; Talbert Sehorn, Klamath Falls, second; and Tom Brand, Salem, third.

Discussion group winners were La Roy Dillon, Hillsboro, first. Dick Stanton, Grants Pass, and Harlalee Wilson, Ashland, tied for second place.

Radio Speakers

In the radio speaking division Florence Hintzen, Portland (Grant high school), won first; Jacque Autrey, Hillsboro, second; and Dick Stanton, Grants Pass, and Beverly Brunton, Eugene, a tie for third place.

Dick Stanton, Grants Pass, won again in the extempore speaking finals. LaRoy Dillon, Hillsboro, placed second; and Harlalee Wilson, Ashland, won third.
