

Lab Organizer Dies in Portland

Dr. John Dice McLaren, who helped organize the modern medical laboratories in the University of Oregon medical school in Portland, died April 29 in his 82nd year. He organized the medical library and was head of the department of physiology for many years.

Born in Canada, Dr. McLaren came to the new state of Kansas at the age of 10. He has degrees from Kansas university, Columbia university, and took courses at Johns Hopkins hospital. There he entered the medical practice and engaged in public health work for 10 years, before organizing the medical school of the University of Oklahoma and becoming its secretary.

Helped Organize

He helped in the organization of the University medical school laboratories in 1910 as head of the department of physiology. The medical library is another of his contributions to the University. He was given a commission in the volunteer medical service corps by the secretary of war in 1918.

In 1926 Dr. McLaren continued to work as research librarian after joining the staff of the Portland Old People's home. He retired from service in 1934. He held memberships in the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Medical association, Sigma Xi, and was a founder of Phi Delta Gamma's Kansas chapter.

Survived by Widow

Dr. McLaren is survived by his widow, Mary T. McLaren, a daughter, Ruth, who is the wife of Dr. Karl W. Onthank; and by granddaughters including Edith Onthank, junior in architecture and allied arts. The doctor was a member of the Presbyterian church.

Funeral services were held in Portland last Friday. Private graveside services were held at Rest Haven Memorial park in Eugene Monday, with Dr. Leavitt O. Wright officiating. Funeral arrangements were made by the Hutch-Hollingsworth chapel.

Queen Bongo Missing

(Continued from page one) they must postpone indefinitely the crowning because they feel there is no other member of the student body with blood rich enough to be distinguished by being named queen. Furthermore, the law school wishes to state that it feels that the exigencies of the times do not call for frivolity, but that the students in and about the law school should concentrate their efforts and time on selling and buying more war

Midwest Calls UO Teacher

For six weeks during the summer Dr. Harold S. Crosland, associate professor of psychology, will teach courses in vocational psychology and psychology of learning at the summer school session of the Central Michigan college of education at Mt. Pleasant, Michigan.

He will leave for the Midwest in June, with his courses at the college starting June 21. His classes will be in the graduate division of the school. While in Michigan Dr. Crosland will visit Dr. Irving Anderson, a former student who wrote his master's thesis at Oregon in 1933. At the present time Dr. Anderson is a professor of education at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

Board Elections

bonds. As a matter of fact, before the disappearance of Queen Bongo, he had pledged himself to buy a stamp a month, along with the rest of the students.

Game Doubtful

With reference to the scheduled ball game between the law students and the BA school, inasmuch as the queen was to pitch, the possibilities of the game's being played are doubtful. However, when and if the queen returns, the law school will make every effort to sober him and have him in condition on the mound at the fateful hour. In spite of the disappearance of the queen, the student body plans to have its annual picnic behind the butte if the sun shines, and in the library if weather conditions are otherwise.

Friday Emerald Goes To Service Men

The special Friday service men's edition of The Emerald will be sent to each University man in the armed forces who left winter and spring terms, it was announced yesterday by Jenelyn Gaston, chairman of the service committee of the war board.

Miss Gaston asked that names of the boys be turned in to her as soon as possible so that they may be typed within the next week. Students and personnel may submit names by phoning Miss Gaston at the Alpha Chi sorority. She also requested volunteers to type addresses and names.

Art Display Given School

Collections of 262 prints, 35 photographs, and 28 oil paintings and water colors will become the property of the Architecture and Allied Arts school as a gift through the art program of the federal works agency of the Works Projects Administration, Dean Ellis F. Lawrence of the art school announced last week.

Mediums employed in the prints are wood engraving, lithographing, etching, serigraph, linoleum print, drypoint, crayon, wood cut, aqua-tint, and silk screen.

Oil, gouache, water color, and egg tempera are included in that section of 28 pieces, "Woman Resting," an oil painting by an

Student Art Displayed At AAA School Gallery

Student art which was exhibited at the Pacific Arts association regional meeting in Portland in April is now on display at the Little Art gallery at the AAA school.

It shares honors with the Red Cross collection of drawings and paintings, which is also being shown at the present time.

Oregon artist, Carl Morris, is one of the collection.

In the photography division an Oregon resident, Minor White, is represented by several of his works. Such titles as "Tug Ida," "Willamette River," "Side of Morrison Bridge," "Lily Pads and Pike—Portland Lumber Co.," and "Kerr-Clifford Mill" are typical of his photographs in the collection.
