

Sass-iety

By STAN WEBER, Society Editor

In spite of hell, high water, and the Dean of Women's ruling that pre-dance drinking should be maintained at a sensible minimum, the Mortar Board dance came off with its usual amount of success last evening. Campus Cop Rhinesmith was not there, but otherwise the annual Vegetable Fling was no different than its predecessors of earlier days.

Only fly in the floor wax was that some Pi Phi's, who were brought up on the theory that "lips that touch liquor shall not touch mine," misinterpreted the Dean's ruling. They thought that all dancers would be REQUIRED to drink at a sensible minimum, whether they ordinarily would drink or not. Well, the Coalition deserves a little celebration, even at this late date.

Wee Willie Wood, pride of the drama department, caused a mild sensation in Springfield Monday night when he announced to his compatriots in that fair city that he would present his impersonation of Carmen Miranda at a local night club, known to Eugene cafe society as the Dutch Girl—because it has a windmill out front. But the dancing in the streets ceased abruptly Thursday afternoon when Wee Willie's promotion manager let it be known that the deal was off. He said Wee Willie refused to appear on the same floor as that occupied by a certain blonde hussy (the first initial of her last name is Zorima). Also, Otis C., a veteran of the ring wars, who now makes his living by dispensing vari-flavored milk shakes, made Willie a better offer. Otis said he'd give free drinks—mikshakes—if Wood would appear in his show. At latest reports Willie was heading north, to take part in the May Day celebration in Salem.

To get back to last night's Social Event, we noticed that a number of lucky lads spent their time during intermission munching on vegetable corsages. Bud Putnam was disappointed when his corsage, which came by oxen train direct from Albany, turned out to be made of hops. "First time I've ever consumed dry hops," he said.

Even politics played an important part at the dance. It seems a leading light of the Greek bloc bounced against one of the Coalition big shots during the playing of the "There Are Such Things." A brief exchange of bitter words ensued, in the course of which the Greek warned his political foe, "Just wait 'til I get you alone." The Coalitionist replied "I sure could use one." And that stopped the argument.

Our spies at the Del Rey reported that business at the little beanery was brisk in the two hours preceding the dance. Shorty specials and Sautern were consumed at a rapid rate, and many campus celebrities were observed making their getaway via the rear exit. A certain Gerlinger hall character was seen making one coke last her until it was time to scam. She seemed to be doodling on the table cloth, but later investigation revealed she was writing undisclosed information in a note book.

Seniors Must Clear Debts to Graduate

The big shots over in Johnson claim that if you expect to graduate this year, pay up.

Just give your dough to C. K. Stalsberg or one of his henchmen behind the wicket upstairs and your diploma will come through OK. Otherwise we warned you.

Before your major school can clear your credits for a sheepskin, all fees, loans, and other obligations must be paid. The University will play square with you if you play square with the business office.

Here's Stuff About Art

Camouflage ranks high in discussion groups at the art school these days as 14 students seek to vanquish their city from the eyes of roving enemy aviators. High on the second floor of the school the "Invisible City" exists in model form for the eyes of camoufleurs and camouflettees to ponder upon and render indiscernable to enemy observers from an altitude of ten thousand feet or more. The altitude is gained by climbing a step ladder put there for the specific purpose. Shadow angles are studied by turning on the sun provided by a 250 watt lamp.

This preparatory course in camouflage is offered interested prospective army personnel by the art school staff and a group of consulting campus professors. The display is open to interested students at any time at the architecture school.

WAA Frolics

headed boy, the bearded lady, a man that didn't get to go to Mortar Board, and other freaks.

Surprise

The Four Knights and a Dream will sing. A magician has been found. That's going to be a surprise. The bearded lady will also be a surprise . . . Ralston will probably take his pin back. Fred Beckwith was going to help out with the barking and stuff, but he had to work at the brewery. So those of you who hadn't planned to come can just change your minds.

Florence Hamilton is chairman of the deal and her henchmen are Barbara McClung, Patty Van Hoosear, Sally Spies, Gerd Hansen, (Dolph was mentioned once), Betty Chatburn, Benny Umphlette, Phyllis Evans, and Dorothy Rogers is publicity writer but since this is a man's edition we had to throw her stuff out. Pee Wee Ross is president of the organization sponsoring it, WAA or something like that.

Incidentally, the money will be used for an allegedly good cause, Joanne Dolph said. She oughta talk louder, though. Anyhow, if ya don't have fun you're a droop. I'm tired and I have to go home and get dressed for Mortar Board, so this is all; you'll have to find out the rest by yourself.

ADOLF HITLER, NAZI CHIEF

They Like the Hall But Miss the Gals

By JACK L. BILLINGS
Copy Boy

It's the life of Riley for the boys at the new detachment headquarters of the army air corps on the campus. The old saying, "When the cat's away the rats will play," is nothing but appropriate for the situation caused by Lt. Cable's recent trip to California, leaving the whole girls' dormitory to Staff Sergeant Page and Private Henley.

Henry gets the cob on the deal, though. Pages makes him sit around and wait for fictitious phone calls while he gallivants around the campus with some twins from Highland house.

The sergeant is a good looking guy with black wavy hair and a broad grin—he doesn't smoke, drink, or anything else and claims that women are "my only weakness."

The private is from Oklahoma and sounds it. He says he's happy in the girls' dorm but gripes at the lack of girls in it. Their commanding officer should be back in town early next week and the students should be coming in shortly thereafter, so their little vacation can't last.

But, in the meantime, the boys are making hay while the sun shines (Dear Censor—last sentence is not reference to weather; merely an old saying like "Et tu, Brute" or "Have It Around the Infield.")

Enrollment at Catholic university of America has reached 1875.
