

Dr. Moore Speaks Saturday On 'Two Books of 1543'

An illustrated public address on "The Two Great Books of 1543," one by Copernicus on astronomy and the other by Vesalius on anatomy, will be given this evening, May 15, at 8 o'clock in Gerlinger hall by Dr. A. R. Moore of the psychology department. The address, which is being sponsored by Sigma Xi and Phi Beta Kappa, university scholastic honoraries, will follow the annual spring initiations of the two societies and a joint dinner which they will give in honor of the initiates.

Dr. Moore, who has studied biological sciences in this country, Europe, and the Orient, now has charge of University instruction in the history of science. He will deliver the lecture in celebration of the fourth centenary of the publication of the two great works of Copernicus and Vesalius, which appeared within a few weeks of each other in 1543.

The first, "De Revolutionibus Orbium Coelestium," the foundation of modern astronomy, was brought to the Polish Copernicus on his deathbed May 24 of that year. The other, the Belgian Vesalius, "De Humani Corporis Fabrica," the foundation of the modern science of anatomy, was published about a month later. Dr. Moore will relate the history of these works, explain their significance to modern science, and illustrate his address with reprints from Vesalius' book and with slides. The address will be given in alumni hall.

Immediately preceding the address Sigma Xi and Phi Beta Kappa will hold their annual spring initiations for members newly elected to the respective organizations, and will then join in a dinner honoring the initiates. The Phi Beta Kappa initiation will take place at 5:30 in the recreation room in Gerlinger hall, the Sigma Xi initiation at 5:45 in the men's lounge, and the dinner in the sun room at 6:30.

Special Honor

Two events will take place at the dinner. Sigma Xi will confer a special honor on Dr. Morton E. Peck, emeritus head of the biology department at Willamette university, for his outstanding work in botany and particularly for a manual on the flora of Oregon which he has recently published. Dr. John C. Merriam, president emeritus of the Carnegie Institute of Washington, D. C., will deliver the charge to Sigma Xi initiates. Dr. Merriam, one of the country's outstanding paleontologists, has long been known in this state for his scientific investigations of the geological deposits in the John Day region.

UO to Greet Trainees

in charge of the assembly. The committee of army men working with her on the assembly are: Private Sumner Walters, California, chairman; Private Dick Anderson, Iowa; and Private Bill Deskin, Missouri.

A number of girls were selected from each woman's living organization according to the size of the house to attend a dance to be given at the training detachment barracks this evening from 8:30 to 12 p.m. The women will wear name tags and draw names for the first dance. Mix-up dances such as John Paul Jones will be used extensively and refreshments will be served. Both the soldiers and the girls will put on entertainment during intermission.

In charge of arrangements for the training detachment for the dance is staff sergeant Marvin M. Smith who will work with Marion Harris, campus representative in charge of arrangements.

The executive council also appointed Jean Fridger, freshman in liberal arts, as chairman of the campus war board to replace Len Barde. She will take office immediately.

Martha Jane Switzer, junior in business administration, was appointed chairman of the Oregon Federation.
