

Cram-Packed Week Awaits Newcomers

Registration Dates

Actual registration for classes will take place October 1 and 2 with classes beginning Monday, October 4.

Of special importance to freshmen is the opportunity to talk with advisers who can give them aid in choosing courses helpful in preparing them to take the A-12 (Army) or V-12 (Navy) program tests which will be given on the campus early in November.

These advisers will help the student to coordinate his course in his field of major study with those which will better prepare him for service in the armed forces. These V-programs are designed to give men special training in the field of engineering, psychology, medicine, languages, supply corps, chaplain service, deck officer, aviation, or merchant marine work.

Shumaker Advises

This new branch of the regular advisory service of the University is under the direction of Kenneth Shumaker, director of the lower division advisory group. He has not yet announced who these advisers will be, but every freshman is urged to see one of these advisers before the day of registration in order to give himself a better opportunity to participate in the V programs.

All students will confer with advisers assigned to them at registration, this being in addition to the special advisory service in connection with military work.

Info Furnished

During freshman week, from September 29 to October 2, an information desk on the first floor of Johnson hall will be open to aid students who want any questions cleared up for them.

Other special events of the week include open house at Wesley house, Westminster house, and the YWCA; the AWS assembly September 30 at 4 p.m. in the music building; and the YWCA breakfast for freshman girls October 3.

October 16 has been set as the final day for addition of new courses or new registration, and November 25 will mark the first vacation date, Thanksgiving. Finals for the term will begin December 13, and the term will end December 16.
