

READY TO FACE . . .

. . . the Navycats are the men of Oregon's ASTU team. Although they have had little practice they have the weight which may topple the Willamette team, which is composed almost completely of navy trainees. The ASTU line and Navycats' line average about the same, a rugged 200 pounds, which should make the game hard fought from start to finish.

ASTU, Navycats Vie; Willamette Eleven Arrives Tomorrow

Army-navy rivalry, which always makes the big game played in the East the highlight of the season, will invade the campus early tomorrow morning with the arrival of Willamette university's Navycats for a tilt with Oregon's ASTU squad.

It's the first game of the season for the soldiers, and although their training period has been short, their extra weight could easily make them the favorites. Coach John Warren has been relentlessly driving the team through drills designed to thwart Willamette's "power play" offense system.

All Around

But the Navycats do not rely entirely on line smashes for their tallies. Lt. Robert G. Davis, manager of the ASTU team says they look pretty tough in more ways than one.

But if the lieutenant thinks the navy is tough, he thinks the army is tougher, not only because of the old army-navy rivalry, but because he has been out every night watching the men go through their rugged training maneuvers.

Tough Line

The ASTU men have a heavy line to match Willamette's. In fact, the line averages close to 200 pounds, no small amount of which is packed by Gordon Peterson, 265-pound tackle, and a mighty tough man to meet on any gridiron.

Coming from their 20-0 triumph over Whitman the Navycats may be a little cocky, but the grimness of the army line leaves little doubt of the fact that they will not find the going easy. It's the old army-navy game.

American-Soviet Relations Scheduled as Forum Topics

Will we fight Russia? What can our relations be with a country that has different ideas on economic, political, and social governing? Learn what you mean when you brand someone as "dirty Communist," tonight in Guild hall.

In furthering the University of Oregon student's view on post-war relations with our allies, the ASUO is sponsoring an open discussion for civilian and army students tonight at 7:30, at Guild hall in Johnson.

Dr. Gordon Wright, well-known professor of history, and local authority on international relations will open the forum with some facts and opinions on the younger generation's attitude toward the Soviet Union. This meeting is the first of a series to be sponsored by the student affairs committee. Others will follow, inviting various speakers, if enthusiasm is shown tonight.

Students of this campus who have balked when the Soviet government is mentioned, this meeting will be dedicated, giving them a chance to view the whys and wherefores of their attitude. For those who liked to argue, for those who have wanted to argue, or for those who are interested in learning more of our post-war situation with Russia, this meeting promises to be a stimulating one.

Bandage Rollers Need Fifty Chairs

Whenever the Red Cross committee of the campus war board receives 50 or more chairs, they will be able to open the Red Cross room and start the year's work rolling bandages and making surgical dressings.

A cup will be awarded every term to the house whose girls work the most hours. House representatives will be announced later.

Dress Requirements

Girls should wear cotton dresses and a bandana, Carol Wicke, head of the Red Cross committee, said. They may keep them at the building so that they can change their clothes there rather than go clear to their houses to change. Girls should plan to spend the full hour when they go, Miss Wicke said.

Girls who were instructors last year and are back this year are: Marty Beard, Doris Hailand, Marian Schaefer, Gerd Hansen, Betty Ann Keup, Barbara Mc-

Curry Lauds Air Trainees; Touts Course

Members of the AAFTC passed in review Thursday before Major General John F. Curry, commanding general of the army air forces western technical training command, and received the terse compliment, "They did very well. The air force always does."

General Curry was on the campus to inspect the pre-meteorology students to "see how they live and how they work." He reported that he was very pleased with what he had seen. In regard to the program under which they are training, General Curry said, "the pre-engineering course which they are taking is bound to be of value no matter what they do."

General Curry will go to Portland and Seattle after leaving here and will return to Denver, headquarters of the western technical training command, Saturday night.

Rumors Point ROTC's Return

Rumors of the return of a group of junior ROTC students to the campus on October 15 were circulated this week, although no official word has yet been received here by army officers as to the time of arrival.

The men left at the end of spring term last year to go to training camp. They will stay here until they are sent to officers' candidate schools, and will

If There's Smoke There's Fire . . . Except This Time

With sirens screeching, bells clanging, and firemen staring sleepily into the night, two engines of the Eugene fire department pulled up to the DU house, alias Hawthorne lodge, last night, and tired men in ancient firecoats dashed up and pounded on the front door.

A freshman, her eyes hidden behind a heavy coating of Mabeline, answered the impolite pounding.

The door open, the firemen dashed downstairs; the girls stared; the soldiers looked bewildered, no doubt wondering if this was a common occurrence.

Finally the firemen came sheepishly back upstairs, while one of the girls cleverly explained:

"Our furnace smokes that way all the time."

Several of the more moronic onlookers made remarks about the music being hot, etc., but the firemen weren't interested. They sleepily climbed into the big red wagons and roared away into the night.

Coed Frolic Head Names Assistants For Hen Party

Chairmen for the annual Coed Capers, tentatively set for November 19, were announced by Gerd Hansen, general chairman of the feminine frolic. The proceeds will go to buy a bomber. There will be a victory queen for the occasion.

Those appointed are: food, Connie Fullmer; decorations, Polly Gordon; sophomore skit, Signe Eklund; junior skit, Joan Dolph; senior skit, Shirley Huntington and Janet Ross; tickets, Mary McCandless; faculty, Lois Winsley; and clean-up, Irene Jolivtte. Some positions are still to be appointed.

Art-Minded Soldiers Invited to Open House

Soldier students with either a slight or extensive knowledge of art are invited by the allied arts league to an open house Saturday afternoon in the little art gallery, Edith Onthank, president of the league, said Thursday. Hours for the open house will be from 4 to 6, with invitations including all military students interested in spending free time in the art school.

Hall Small; Iglooto House Weekend Hop

Saturday's dance will be held in McArthur court instead of Gerlinger hall as previously announced, according to a statement released by Dr. Donald M. Erb, president of the University. The change was made because the number of couples expected to go to the dance far exceeded the capacity of Gerlinger hall. President Erb stressed the fact, however, that this ruling was not to be considered a precedent for other dances to be held during the year.

This will mark the first time that students will have a chance

Independent Group Announce Meeting

ISA offices, 213 McArthur court, will be open every day next week from 4 to 5, it was decided at a cabinet meeting yesterday afternoon. During the week, representatives will be chosen from each independent house to sit in the senate. The first senate meeting is scheduled for next Thursday, October 21, at 4 p.m. The room will be announced later.

Symposium Devotees Schedule Gathering

Any students interested in gaining practical experience in public speaking are urged to attend the meeting of the symposium group Tuesday, October 19, in room 107 Friendly, Robert D. Clark, director of the group, said Thursday. Freshman men and women as well as old students are invited to the meeting.

Fall term is spent preparing the topic chosen by the group which travels about the state during winter term speaking before service clubs, special audiences, and high school groups interested in the topics to be discussed.

University of Oregon students have gained considerable reputation through the symposium, which was initiated ten years ago by W. A. Dahlberg of the University speech department.

Local Farmers Call for Hands

Workers are urgently needed to pull beets or pick filberts this Saturday, Marty Beard, head of the agriculture aid committee of the campus war board, said Thursday.

At least 20 workers are needed for both jobs. All those interested should contact Marty Beard, telephone 1309, or any member of Phi Theta Upsilon, junior women's service honorary.

Those going will meet at the employment agency at 7:45 Saturday morning where they will be picked up and taken to the fields.

Besides the lunch hour there will be two rest periods, Miss Beard said. They will pay 18 cents a sack for beets.

Gloves, if possible, should be worn, she said, and old slacks or jeans, old shoes and warm clothes in case of cold weather.

Miss Beard suggested that the workers bring a big lunch so there would be enough to eat at rest periods and that it would be a good idea to bring water or coffee in a thermos.

Hot Feet

Research men have studied the problem for years, and now they have this statement to make:

The Mixer this week has decisively proved
What a beating G.I. shoes can take.
