Conference Slate Contains Full 16 Games Despite War

Basketball will carry on at Oregon in spite of the war, Coach Hobson declared as he disclosed the Northern Division conference schedule in its revised form Monday, and also the list of pre-conference tilts. Oregon will play a full sixteen games as in former years, with Idaho, Washington, Washington State, and Oregon State providing four games each. Of these, half will be at home and half on the road.

With a strong pre-season schedule lined up, Hobson hopes to take his cagers into the tougher competition with considerable experience under their belts. "We've been scrimmaging pretty heavily," declared Hobson. "And the boys are developing into a fairly smooth-working combination. Most of them are quite green, but things are coming along all right, and on the whole it's not so bad—not so bad at all."

Little Disclosed

Which may mean anything. Hobson had nothing to say either in approval or disapproval of the schedule which, as in other years, includes a four-games-in-five-nights invasion of the Inland Empire. Oregon's full slate follows:

- Friday, Jan. 7—Washington at Seattle.
- Saturday, Jan. 8—Washington at Seattle.
- Saturday, Jan. 15—O.S.C., here.
- Friday, Jan. 21—Washington, here.
- Saturday, Jan. 22—Washington, here.
- Saturday, Jan. 29—O.S.C. at Corvallis.

Empire Trip

- Tuesday, Feb. 1—W.S.C. at Pullman.
- Wednesday, Feb. 2—W.S.C. at Pullman.
- Friday, Feb. 4—Idaho at Moscow.
- Saturday, Feb. 5—Idaho at Moscow.
- Monday, Feb. 14—Idaho, here.
- Tuesday, Feb. 15—Idaho, here.

- Saturday, Feb. 19—O.S.C. at Corvallis.
- Tuesday, Feb. 22—W.S.C., here.
- Wednesday, Feb. 23—W.S.C., here.

Non-Conference Games

- The pre-conference schedule reads:
- Friday, November 19—Fee's Music Makers, here.
 - Saturday, Nov. 20—Medical school, here.
 - Wednesday, Nov. 24—Pacific Packards, here.
 - Friday, Nov. 26—Albina Hellships, here.
 - Saturday, Nov. 27—Albina Hellships, here.
 - Friday, Dec. 3—Willamette university, here.
 - Saturday, Dec. 4—Willamette at Salem.

- Saturday, Dec. 18—Northern Division Jamboree at Astoria.
- Monday, Dec. 20—Albina Hellships at Portland.
- Tuesday, Dec. 21—Albina Hellships at Portland.
- Wednesday, Dec. 22—Fort Lewis at Portland (tentative).
- Thursday, Dec. 30—Albina Hellships, here.
- Saturday, Jan. 1—Albina Hellships, here.

There may be one or two more games added, Hobson declared. He added that he expected the schedule to present stiff opposition all the way along with no push-overs.

The first game, which is scheduled for next Friday, the nineteenth, is with Fee's Music Makers, one of the stronger Portland independent teams, and the Saturday night game following is with the Medical school five, reputed to be staffed with former collegiate stars.

Hoop Squads Play Friday

Oregon's wartime basketball squad opens its season Friday night when Hobson's hoopsters tackle the Fee's Music Maker independent team from Portland in McArthur court at 8 p.m.

"We'll be ready for them," said Hobson, who has been stressing heavy offensive drill for the past week. "Although we know little about them as a team, I'm sure they haven't got anything we can't match."

The Fee squad will probably include two or three ex-college stars, such as Merle Kruger, 3-year letterman guard for Oregon State. Several topnotch independent players from Portland hoop circles will also bolster the lineup. Among these will be Bob Rankin, 6-foot 2-inch forward who starred last year for Byerly's Sporting Goods, and Eldon Gregg, a 6-foot, 1-incher.

"They're all taller than my boys," Hobson complained. "What's happened to all the local tall timber, anyway?"

The Fee game will start at 8 p.m., as will all the other non-conference tilts.

Prospect Good For Hoopsters

According to Coach Howard Hobson, Oregon's basketball team looks fairly good after one month of daily practice. The team lacks only experience and size.

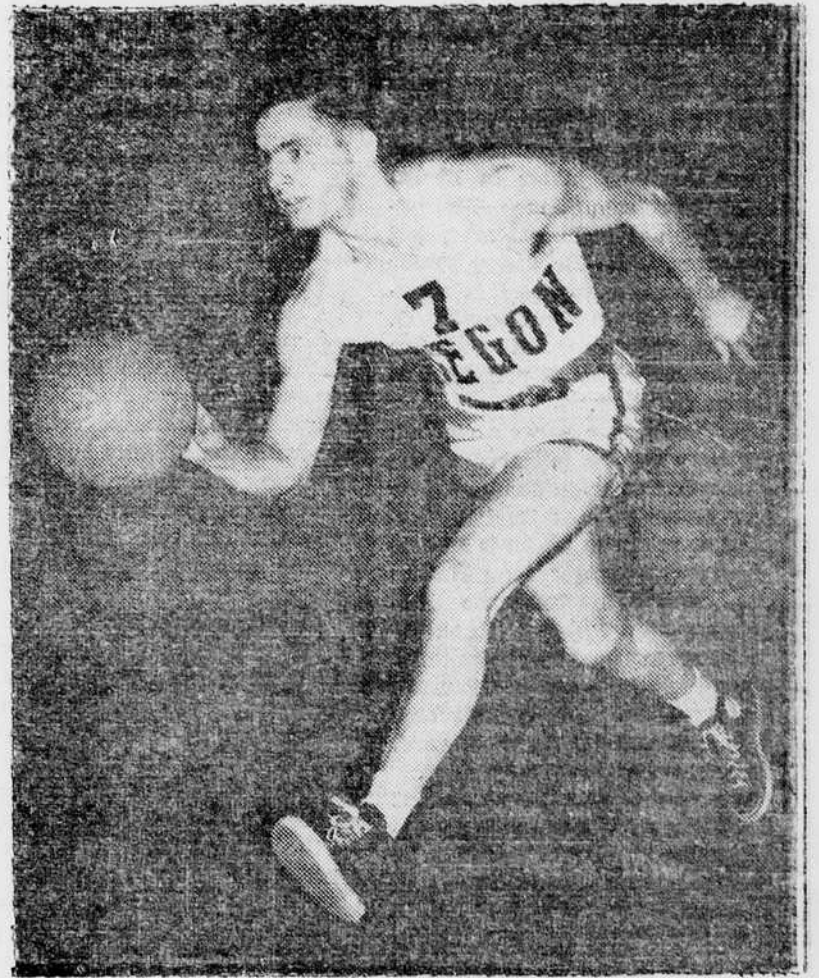

There are fifteen on the squad now, and only three of these have had previous experience at Oregon although they were not varsity or squad men. Several transfers who played at other colleges are on the squad and the remainder are freshmen.

From Last Year

Those returning are Bob Caviness from the freshman squad; Bob Hamilton who also played on the freshman team; and Edgar Allen.

Promising transfers are: George Bray, 6-foot 6-inch center, from Southern Oregon College of Education; Dick Holmes, 6-foot 2-inch candidate from Menlo junior college; Marion Huff, regular forward last year at Eastern Oregon college of education; Lowell Welch, guard from Stockton junior college, California; Dick Stonebreaker from the freshman squad of Oregon State; and Barney Koch, who played varsity baseball last spring but who is going out for basketball for the first time.

Freshman men showing the most promise at present are: Luke Baccelleri from Roosevelt high and leading scorer of Portland's prep basketball league; Bill Phillips, also from Roosevelt's champ team; and Norman Henwood from Grant. Others are: Kenneth Hays, 6-foot 7-inch center prospect from Waitsburg, Washington; Lee Wimberly from
