Romance Unrationed: Rings, Rice Abound

By M. M. ELLSWORTH and MARTHA THORSLAND

With the Military Ball over and the memory of one huge success behind us, we sort of hoped there would be lots of romantic news. We can tell you this much:

ADPi Yvonne Edwards has an eastern fraternity pin, from what we can find out, but is not ready to divulge the fellow's name. Now is that fair? Pi Phi Audrey Cardell recently took a SAE pin which belongs to Bob Mills, formerly of Nevada.

Hearts and Fliers

As soon as things can be arranged Marge Cordon, Pi Phi, will fly to California to marry Lt. Plin Laurence of the army air corps which gives a "they-lived-happily-ever-after" ending to a high school romance.

Alums are still getting married: Nelda Rohrback, Alpha Chi and ex-little colonel, to Lee Spitzer, Phi Sig, in New Orleans this month. Another Alpha Chi and another big event in New Orleans was the marriage of Clint Childs, SAE, and Fran Johnston, on January 6.

Ring Parade

Even more engagements:—Gerry Stowell and Mick Maddren, Alpha Chi and SAE announced theirs last week.

AWS Notes

For the UO coed: Do you have at least one or two extra hours a week (left over after classes, furious studying???) and such essential things as eating and sleeping) which you fill by pouring down cokes, playing bridge, gossiping, or moaning about life in general?

Red Cross

Ah—you have? Then why not trip over to the Red Cross center to fill those hours profitably for the war effort. They do need more girls and perhaps it would help make amends for the accusations of such persons as Damon Runyon whose unpublished article "I beg your pardon, girls" seems to have practically "torn the girls of America apart"—telling of women's failure to answer the nation's call to uniform. But since many of us want our educations and are lucky enough to be able to get them now, one way of helping almost as much IS to HELP—in just such things as Red Cross.

Marines

More about women—and college girls, too—Mrs. Stuart Strong, past dean of Mills college, will be the principal speaker at the AWS assembly next Tuesday, February 15, at 4 p. m., speaking on "Women and Democracy." Two marine staff sergeants, Adaline Franks and L. L. Pittenger will tell of opportunities for women and training required in the marine corps. Several AWS cabinet members from O.S.C. will also be present to give us an idea of our "rival's" activities to date.

And don't forget, Thursday, February 17, are annual AWS elections. This is the last assembly or affair in general conducted by present AWS officers—after that it's up to the new officers.

Ophelia Observes

Ophelia snuffled. She was reading a tender message on a Grade A cabbage leaf, from Gordon, the garbage man. She knew it was from Gordon because it was signed, "Your loving door-to-door bore." He was on important maneuvers . . . including a mission which covered half of Eugene. So, no Military Ball.

Ophelia formed a stag line of one . . . looking her usual lovely self garbed in a papier-mache formal. Someone tried to lean . . . Ophelia rustled haughtily. "Pahdon me?" he awsked and mumbled something about the scenery. To keep the conversation going she gestured at him . . . too quick, he ducked and fainted . . . or fainted . . . with a right . . . good will. Floor burns! Ophelia squared away and set her course, (note: nautical terms) . . . for Major Averill. Had some military secrets to whisper about. Couldn't find him . . . when he wasn't with his wife.

Ipana Grin

Party getting a bit dull . . . climbed the balcony, took over the spotlight. Ophelia shone. Chased a certain man all over the floor with it. He smiled up at her . . . or around there . . . his teeth shone like pearls. Thought of her pawn shop and smiled back. Dropped the "spot". Glass all over the place. Creaked to a sitting position. Ophelia was thinking. Made up a speech about accepting the Cover Girl title . . . was candidate for her house, Staggers Inn. Words just wouldn't come to her . . . no one else would either. Winked 'til pop-eyed at a Government Issue over in a corner . . . he was pop-eyed to begin with. He started toward her . . . tears did a hundred-yard squish in her baby pink eyes. She stepped daintly forward . . . observed speed limit . . . slowed down to 30 mph. Put up her stop sign too late . . . he coasted right past her.

Sadly Ophelia checked out . . .

Coed of the Week...

'Real' People, Sincerity Liked by WAA Prexy

By BETTY ANN STEVENS

Dark, soft-spoken Beverly Goetz grinned disarmingly. "You know, I just detest things like this." She muttered darkly, and she hastened to explain, ducking her head, "Well, you know what I mean. It's embarrassing!"

Following promises to make the interview as painless as possible, the WAA prexy continued, "What I like? Oh, dear! Well, for the last three summers I've been a counselor at Camp Namanu . . . the ranch. I like animals and the out-of-doors, and I learned to shoe a horse. It was fun . . . the hills around . . . and we used to tease the horses and make them run and buck."

What "Bev" likes about people, she "just can't explain. Well, it's just a feeling." She appreciates sincerity.

Youth-hostelling was another well-developed like prior to college, and she has bicycled from her home in Grants Pass to New York. "When the war's over I'm cruel life. "No love, no nothin'" Decided to take in the "Love and Marriage" lecture Sunday . . . had a question for the box, doc. "Ophelia, should you change your name to Celia, so men won't double deal ya?"

Advices Answer

Very proud of the question . . . stumped speakers. Finally suggested that she just call herself . . . Ophelia crawled. Never so insulted . . . in front of so many people. Stumbled into Professor So 'n So who mouthed an "A ha!" and began to beat on her . . . verbally. "Why," he shouted quietly, "did you have to camp in the middle of the floor at the Military Ball?"

Ophelia murmured, "I'm a scout, clout, for the Mademoiselle. Just copying a few gowns to get the shape of things."

going back to that for one thing. The people you meet are so swell."

Westminster house and its atmosphere reminds her of hostelling. "I'm not a very religious person," she hesitated, "so I didn't see that side of it, but the people are so real."

Fun

To a question concerning WAA's successful venture, fun night, she replied, "Well, the main idea was in trying to fulfill the need of something to do on Friday night, and that's about all on that point."

Besides being a Mortar Board, a past member of Phi Theta Upsilon, and a "senior majoring physical education and minoring in science," she is an Only Child, for which "I've never forgiven my parents."

About her dislikes . . . "Oh goodness! It must be people who never do anything for anyone else, and I like having things done for me," she stated with a mischievous glint.

"Oh, you might put in that I'm a nurses' aide. I'm proud of that. I worked myself to death over the weekend."
