

Dry Run

By P.F.C. TED GOODWIN

Having no quarrel with Orson's cousin Carveth and seeing no significance in the fact that the United Nations now have 16 Russias to vote on in the peace conference, there is little ammunition for a colm, ergo dry run.

In connection with the announcement that Oregon Pfc's can do more burpees than other people is the significant fact that many little-used muscles are being developed; for example, Jim Gibson can now wiggle his ears. He blushed a little when he semaphored the answer to a math problem and the proctor almost caught on.

Whoever painted the name "Rodney" on the (late?) hyper-thyroid mongrel was guilty of immature judgment, lack of editorial integrity, and youth's tendency to leap at ill-founded conclusions. The dog is (was) really Big George. There is a decrepit white dawg weighing about 10 grams known as Little George and an underslung creature with a phenomenal ability to gain on fast moving cars called Black George. Black George is the most lovable of all. He is intensely galling in the face of oncoming front wheels. A true infantryman, he will someday try to stop a tank.

Pfc's in the infantry, (something like second lieutenants in the air corps) were prematurely happy to hear a recent 'treenogram to the effect when they have successfully completed 25 missions they would be sent to some army camp for a rest. So few have left for places like Camp Roberts or Camp Hale that it is generally believed the wolf scare was something of a hoax.

Student Union Group Seeks Student Ideas

Prospects for construction of a Student Union building on the campus in the immediate post-war period have been brightened this term by a declaration from University officials that the building is number one on the construction list. With the assurance that construction will start as soon as the war is over, members of the all-campus Student Union committee are launching a campaign to find out what facilities will be needed in the building.

Before blueprints can be drawn up and financial estimates made, planners must know what facilities the students feel are necessary for campus life. The desires of Oregon students will determine to a large extent the size of the project and when the committee knows more about estimated cost, financial goals can be set.

Helping the all-campus committee with the facilities campaign will be three class committees appointed last week. Members from the freshman, sophomore and junior classes were chosen as permanent members of the committee which will continue as long as the students remain in school. At the present time there is a nucleus of thirty students working on Student Union plans.

Working from their new Student Union office in Johnson hall, these Union enthusiasts will start spring term to conduct personal symposiums among Oregon students. A "suggested facilities" file has already been set up in the office and ideas can be handed in at the office or to a member of the committees.

Student Union building and furnishing fund received a boost during the term and is now $68,174.92. The state board of higher education officially approved of the allocation of Cooperative store rentals to the building fund providing that no emergencies arrive in the financial condition of the University during the war. A total accumulation of rentals amounting to $10,626.33 and the annual rental of $2,500 will be channeled into the fund.

In addition to the rental revenue, Student Union received a gift donation from relatives of Tom Taylor, Oregon alum who met his death during World War II. The $10,000 will be available for a memorial room in the building.

Art Museum Hours On Wednesday Altered
