

Ensign Tells Women Of Need for More Waves

"This talk about the manpower shortage is not so much imagination and fluff," Ensign Elizabeth Hill of the Wave recruiting office in Portland, told several University of Oregon students who were interested in the Waves. "There is a genuine need for additional enlistments in the women's services," she said.

A graduate of Miami university, Oxford, Ohio, in 1936, Ensign Hill received her master's degree from Wellesley college a year later and then taught Latin in high school. While in college she was a Phi Beta Kappa, and a member of Mortar Board and Delta Gamma sorority.

Asked what chance a college girl has of becoming an officer, Ensign Hill said that officer candidates are still being taken directly from civilian life, but some of the best officers are those chosen from the ranks after six months of training. Officers must have had four years of college or two of college and two of business experience.

Requirements for Wave enlistment demand that the recruit must be at least 20 years old, and if under 21 have her parents' consent; teeth must be in good condition at the time she signs up; her vision must at least be corrected with glasses; she must not be shorter than four feet eleven inches; with weight in proportion to height; the latest educational requirement is that she have completed at least two years of high school.

After "boot" training at Hunter college, where naval history, organization, correspondence, and personnel, drill and physical education is learned, a Wave is allowed to choose her own post and as nearly as possible is sent there. She is eligible for 14 days' leave every year and receives an ample number of 48-hour passes.

Ensign Hill also said that there is little distinction made between the uniforms of the officer group and the enlisted group. Base pay begin at $50 for an apprentice seaman, is $78 for a third class petty officer (a rating often received after advanced training), and is $138 for a chief petty officer. There is a $200 uniform allowance and no room, board, tax, or medical expense to pay. Ensign Hill reports that there is very little close supervision of Waves in the barracks.

A girl may be sworn in on her 20th birthday if she begins examinations and papers a month beforehand. First papers may be signed at the recruiting station here, and the navy will pay transportation to Portland for the swearing in process.

There are many openings for yeomen and storekeepers, the recruiter said, and 25 per cent of the Waves work in aviation—as link trainer instructors, control tower operators, parachute riggers, aviation machinist mates, and photographer's mates. Other opportunities exist in the hospital corps, in radio technician work, in post offices overseas—censoring and sorting mail, and in assistant chaplain work as organists.

"The navy will never be able to get along without the Waves," Ensign Hill quoted Vice-Admiral McIntyre.

Marie Rogndahl, Finalist

from Meier and Frank's store window. Her appearances are being handled by Carl Warner, representing Phil Spitalny's all-girl radio show.

The first of the finalists appeared last Sunday, and another will sing Sunday, March 26. No indication has been made as to how many finalists will be chosen. From them, three contestants will be selected to compete in Cleveland in June. The winner will be offered a contract with the Hour of Charm program.

Because Miss Rogndahl will be absent Tuesday, March 28, a concert in which she was to appear on that date has been postponed until Tuesday, April 11. The young singer is expected to return April 10, in time to appear on this program with other students of Sigurd Nilssen, professor of voice.

Postwar Rehabilitation

Co-featured at the assembly was the installation of associated women students officers. Mary Riley was installed as president; Ardis Jensen, vice-president; Signe Eklund, secretary; Mary McClandless, treasurer; Beatrice King, sergeant-at-arms; and Roseann Leckie, reporter. Symbol of their responsibilities, a red rose, was given to each of the new officers by Marilyn Campbell, retiring president.

Ensign Elizabeth Hill from the Portland recruiting office, was introduced to the girls by Miss Campbell, and she announced that she would be in the dean of women's office all day Friday to speak to any coeds interested in the Waves. Ensign Hill, a graduate of Miami university, member of Phi Beta Kappa and Mortar Board, emphasized the fact that she was not urging girls to drop out of college in order to enlist in the armed forces. However, she stated that 92,400 Waves are needed by the navy before the end of 1944 and every woman should reconsider her future.

ASTP, Air Corps To Mess Together

The ASTP has joined the air corps. Only in the matter of eating, however. Beginning today the pre-meds on the campus will eat at Hendricks hall with the air corps men.

Reason for the joint eating facilities is that the kitchen at John Straub hall is equipped for a much larger number of people and it would not be economical to maintain separate kitchens.

Response to Weather Brings Pill Patients

Recent changes in the weather of sunny Oregon also warrant a surge of infirmary patients. Those on the report from the health center for Thursday, March 23, include, Doris Lakin, Maurine Staub, Katherine Korn, Mary Winn, Lavetta Varlay, Halsey Taylor, and Floyd Stapp. Soldiers on the list are, Peter Colstad, Wendell Lienhard, Don McSparrin, Jerome Nemerow, and Edwin Poehlman.

Roberta Madden was discharged today after a serious illness, as was James Campbell of the army. California was never like this.

Bob Hamilton, versatile guard on this year's Oregon hoop team, was named on the Washington State all-opponent team. Jack Nichols of Washington was the only other player in the Northwest conference league to be named on the team.

Hobby Hobson, who is the only basketball coach in the Northwest on the association board of directors, is now at a basketball association meeting. Hobson is representing the Northwest on a three-man committee which will interview the national rules committee. While there he will present a number of protests.

Among the many things that are considered by him to be wrong are the marketing of new basketball equipment without the approval of the N.C.A.A. and the coaches.

Another point up for protest is the raising of the baskets or the passing of rules to outlaw the playing of men over 7 feet. Any rule that would be passed against the playing of tall men would be very unfair to the men. They can't help it if they are tall and they have just as much right to play as a short man.

If a player is able to keep the opponents' shots from going through the hoop more power to him. There are many teams in the nation that have ways of shooting to keep the goal tender from batting down their shots. One team was so skillful in shooting that they arched their shots high and hit the backboard at a large angle and thus kept the ball out of the reach of the tallest player.

There has been a proposed rule change that would prohibit the use of a zone defense. Even though the zone defense has been very effective in use against the Webfoots Hobson believes that the coaches should be able to develop a way of breaking through the zone.

The only thing he approves of is raising the number of personal fouls allowed from four to five.
