ISA Candidates

Brown eyes sparkling, the slim, brown independent candidate for second position on the ASUO council has whirled through three years at Oregon filled with activities and with a high scholarship record.

A business administration major, Adele Riggs is a member of Phi Chi Theta, junior women's honorary, the Student Union committee, and associate editor of the 1943-44 Oregonian.

She has taken an active interest in co-op affairs, too, serving as president of Hilyard house, president of the inter-co-op council, and all co-op social chairman. Nearly every term, Adele has been on the honor roll, twice with a 4-point.

Her deep tan was acquired working in a shipyard last summer, and she plans to return again this summer, before returning for her senior year at Oregon.

First introducing Junior Prom court candidates at the ASUO nominating assembly in her capacity as co-chairman of Junior Weekend, Anne Craven later took her place on the platform Thursday as independent candidate for senior representative on the ASUO council. As Marian Gage said in her introduction, the Emerald news editor "has been outstanding in her three years at the University, tireless in working on the Emerald, and has had a well-rounded interest in activities, both social functions and war work."

Anne's 62½ inches of height are topped with dark, naturally curly hair. When she is not working on the Emerald, or serving in some capacity on the WAA cabinet, the war board committee, or on Junior Weekend, Anne finds time to participate in tennis, softball, and badminton intramurals. She is the newly-elected president of Theta Sigma Phi, national journalism women's honorary.

Despite the fact that she is 100 per cent self-supporting, Anne has maintained a GPA of 3.2, and is vice-president of Highland co-op.

Although a new student on the campus, sandy-haired Gene Conklin has become active in student affairs, and hopes to become more active by being elected junior representative on the ASUO council. Those who have worked with him know that behind his engaging smile is a lot of power to "get things done."

Already Conklin is serving as chairman of the all-campus Student Union committee, and this spring has been junior representative on the ASUO council. At the sophomore Whiskerino he was tapped for Friars, senior men's honorary.

Before coming to the University, Conklin contributed much to his education and experience. In 1944 he attended the George Washington university in Washington, D.C. He attended the Eastern Oregon college of education his sophomore year. There he was business manager of the association of students, and a member of Theta Delta Phi, national honorary society.

Termed at the nomination assembly "most capable for the position of sophomore representative on the ASUO council, Leon Williams has enjoyed his position as freshman class president very much. He has enjoyed working on the freshman dance, and says the committees "really get in and work."

Although a pre-med student, Williams is very interested in music. Acting as song leader for his house, he will lead his living organization, Steiwer hall, in the All-Campus sing. He plays the violin and piano.

One of two male ASUO candidates, he is 5 feet 11 inches tall. Although he has wavy hair, the boys at Steiwer hall forced him to have a close haircut. Anyway, he maintains the nickname of "Curly."

Greek Candidates

One of the busiest rooms in the infirmary this week is that one occupied by Jean Taylor, Greek block leader and candidate for No. 2 position of that ticket. With a typewriter in her lap and spots all over her smiling face, Jean, a victim of chicken pox, is resigned to the fact that she has two more weeks in the infirmary. She still receives visitors, even though they must stand outside her room and shout to her the latest news in campus affairs.

Jean's activities have always been campus-wide, such as secretary of the sophomore class and now of the junior class; member of Kwama and Phi Theta Upsilon honoraries; chairman of the housing committee for Dad's Day; chairman of the Junior Weekend publicity committee; head of the junior skit for Coed Capers; member of junior panhellenic as a freshman, and chairman of the coordinating committee to arrange exchange assemblies with Oregon State.

Vice-president of the Junior class, member of Phi Theta, president of her house, member of Phi Beta, music honorary, general properties chairman of Coed Capers, and honor roll student. These are some of the activities of Ruth Van Buskirk, Greek candidate for the number three position on the executive council.

A liberal arts major, this diminutive, brown-haired junior has consistently made a high GPA while carrying a big share of activities.

When asked for a statement regarding her policy in the coming ASUO elections, Alyson Hales, Greek candidate for senior representative on the ASUO executive council said, "I would like to say that if I am elected I will work with the president and try to carry out her plans to the best of my ability."

A business administration major, she has been actively interested in activities at Oregon since her first year. She was chairman of the war board finance committee; house representative for the Red Cross drive; on the Emerald business staff; WAA basketball manager; Amphibian; member of Phi Theta Upsilon; president of her house, besides maintaining a 3.3 cumulative GPA.

Coming from Pasadena, California, Alyson loves Oregon, but thinks spring term at present is one of the dampest she has seen.

"Since Oregon's doomed — to have women in executive positions, due to conditions beyond all control," said Phyllis Evans, candidate for junior ASUO representative on the Greek ticket, "I hope that in the future the campus will see more student representation, be it women or men, in campus affairs."

Variety is the keynote of Phyllis' activities at Oregon, among which are the rally squad, AWS sergeant-at-arms, Kwama president, chairman of freshman skit for Coed Capers, and house manager for the war bond drive last year.

Phyllis is known for her sparkling personality and her favorite hat — a little brown boy's cap. Although called "Miss Fit," Phyllis is anything but that when it comes to campus activities.

Florence Hintzen, who is running for sophomore representative for the Greek block, is wholeheartedly behind the campus Student Union movement. As Florence says, "I will do my best to help promote plans for the Student Union and to stimulate greater sophomore interest in campus activities."

ated for the senior representative spot, Gene Conklin and Phyllis Evans for junior representative and Florence Hintzen and Leon Williams for sophomore representative on the executive council.

Nancy Ames, ASUO president, introduced the candidates and those vying for the two top positions spoke. Miss Horstman reminded the students of the need for greater participation in student activities and interest in the war and suggested the use of a student war bulletin to be published by the campus war board and ASUO assemblies with speakers who are outstanding in the war effort. She also said that in order to keep up student activity in the functions of government, the meetings of the executive council should be published and a box placed in Co-op for suggestions and opinions. The University of Oregon federation was stressed as a important function.

Miss Holliday spoke of the necessity for more student representation on activity boards such as the student affairs committee (7 faculty, 2 student) and the educational activities board. She also said that the campus needed fewer drives so that they could be better ones and she called for closer cooperation between organizations and a more active and more aware student body.

Miki Campbell, speaking for Miss Taylor, and Miss Riggs were the other two speakers.

Phyllis Evans, president of Kwama, announced the new Kwamas

all-campus Student Union committee, Florence has exhibited a large capacity for work, and is the type of student who would be able to "interest next year's freshmen in campus activities."
