

Army-Navy Training Discussed at Meeting

By JEAN LAWRENCE

Earl M. Pallett, registrar and executive secretary, Wednesday described the four-day meeting of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars which he has been attending in Chicago as "an extremely important meeting and well worth the time and effort to attend." Over 400 registrars from all over the United States and Canada were present.

The evaluation of training and experience obtained by students enlisted in the armed service was the main topic of discussion at the meeting.

"We want to be in a position to evaluate the work of the serviceman before he comes back," Mr. Pallett said in listing four types of training offered under the auspices of the armed services which have already affected the University or will affect it after the war. They are basic or recruit training; formal technical and vocational programs conducted by the services; army specialized and navy college training programs; and correspondence study, off-duty voluntary classes and independent study.

The correspondence study is run by the Armed Forces Institute and has already over 150,000 students, Mr. Pallett said. The off-duty voluntary classes are sponsored by the Armed Forces Institute and are held in the camps. Not all of this work is of college level. Correspondence, off-duty, voluntary, and independent study are expected to increase in number of students immediately after the war during the readjustment period before the men are all mustered out.

Through the emphasis placed on the need of such a study by the American Association of Collegiate Registrars, the American Council on Education has set up a budget of approximately $12,000 to direct a cooperative study of training and experience in the armed services for the council. One of the major functions of the study is to analyze the various programs in the armed services and to develop a handbook for high schools and colleges, describing these programs and offering suggestions as to the approximate equivalents in terms of credit.

The study is also designed to assist these institutions in interpreting examination reports and other credentials that will be provided by the Armed Forces Institutes or other military agencies.

A tabulation made at the meeting with reference to the credit for the pre-meteorology course shows that the action of the faculty of the University is in line with the policy followed by other institutions in the country, Mr. Pallett added. The University gives 72 term hours credit, or 18 hours a term on the four-term basis.

A similar meeting will be held in Chicago again next year to review the year's progress.

Taylor Recital Well Received

By HAL WILSON

Phyllis Taylor, senior in music, presented a highly successful piano recital Tuesday night in the music auditorium to a small but appreciative audience.

The choice of numbers was varied, ranging from the classics of Bach, Brahms, and Beethoven to the modern compositions of Debussy, Prokofieff, Griffes, and Dohnanyi. Also included on the program was a sparkling gavotte in A-minor written by Miss Taylor's instructor, George Hopkins, professor of piano.

Miss Taylor played with the sincerity and depth of feeling of a mature artist, and commanded a brilliant technique. Her rendition of the difficult Beethoven Sonata op. 22 was flawless and moving.

For the lovers of Bach, the chorale, "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" and his Italian concerto left nothing to be desired. Miss Hopkins played the Brahms rhapsody in G-minor with vigor and artistry which made it well received by even the most calloused concert goers. Her wide scope of feeling was displayed by the playing of the modern group, which included Debussy's "Evening in Granada," the march from "The Love of Three Oranges" by Prokofieff, Griffes' "The White Peacock," and Dohnanyi's "Rhapsody in C-Major."

Miss Taylor graciously gave two encores, the "Fantasy in C-minor" by Bach, and Levitaki's "Waltz Tzigane" which were received with warm applause by the audience.

Red Cross Unit to Hold Open House for Visitors

Stepping into the traditional Oregon spirit of welcoming all visitors during Junior Weekend, the University Red Cross unit will hold open house in the surgical dressing room on the third floor of Gerlinger. Carol Wicke, head of the organization, urges all girls to bring their mothers for a visit.

Because of the unexpected gauze shortage which has hit Eugene and the surrounding area, there will be no surgical dressing work done today. Instead, Miss Wicke has called a meeting for all chairmen of committees and board members at 6:30 tonight in the Red Cross room.

Miss Wicke requested that the chairman be prepared to give an oral report of the activities and results accomplished by the members of their committee.
