ed a student loan fund at Oregon as well as at other colleges.

The fellowships are for research in science and in public service.
The scholarships are to be given to graduates of Oregon high schools entering the University.

The Oregon state board of higher education will hold the money in trust for the University.
Mr. Booth died April 28 and left an estate of $250,000. The rest of the estate was bequeathed to members of his family.

Sigma Xi Makes Plans

A sub-committee is investigating the possibility of publishing under the auspices of the University, scientific pamphlets written for the public about the scientific features and natural resources of the state.

Other activities of the committee include a study of library facilities (in particular the files of scientific periodicals), rewriting of the introductions to the lists of courses of the seven science departments in the University catalog, and the problem of sabbatical leave for staff members.

"An important policy of the science committee is to collaborate fully with existing University committees and other planning committees which may eventually be set up (by Phi Beta Kappa, for instance) in order to increase the prestige of the University of Oregon and to enable the University to handle adequately the postwar influx of students," Dr. Van Rysselberghe said.

The committee consists of one representative from each of the seven science departments of the college of liberal arts, and in addition, four members-at-large who form a steering sub-committee which prepares the work of the whole committee.

The committeemen are L. S.
Cressman, head and representative of the anthropology department; H. R. Crosland, associate professor and representative of the psychology department; C. F. Kossack, assistant professor of mathematics and member-at-large; J. C.
Merriam, consultant on values of science, and former president of the Carnegie Institute of Washington, D. C., member-at-large; A. R.
Moore, research professor of general physiology, member-at-large;

A. F. Moursund, head and representative of the mathematics department; W. V. Norris, head and representative of the physics department; W. D. Smith, head and representative of the geology and geography department; P. Van Rysselberghe, chairman, associate professor of chemistry and member-at-large; and H. B. Yocom, head and representative of the biology department.

Dr. Van Rysselberghe, who is chairman of the Sigma Xi committee, is also this year's president of the Oregon chapter. At the last meeting J. M. McGee, associate professor of chemistry, was elected chapter president for 1944-45.
Secretary and stenographer for the committee is Mrs. Lois Newman, secretary and typing instructor in the school of business administration.
