

Paper Drive Chairmen Reveal Prize Winners; ADPi Girls Victorious

Five dollars worth of phonograph records were awarded to Alpha Delta Pi, first prize winner in the scrap paper drive. Florence Hintzen and Bibbits Strong, co-chairmen of the drive, announced the winners Tuesday. Alpha Phi was awarded $3 worth, and Delta Delta Delta received $2 worth of records.

Collections of scrap paper, under the auspices of the salvage committee of the war board, began Friday, October 20, but transportation, rainy weather, and lack of help delayed collections. The small amount of paper left at some of the houses will be picked up today.

Over six tons of paper for use in the war effort was collected in the drive. Ultimately it may go to battle as containers for blood plasma, waterproof wrappers for weapons and cartridges, or packing for rations.

Miss Hintzen and Miss Strong expressed thanks for "the marvelous job of collecting, and for being so patient about its pickup."

Although Miss Strong worked in this drive, she has temporarily resigned her position as co-chairman of the salvage committee, Carol Wicke, war board chairman, has announced. She will return to the board winter term, when her academic load is not as heavy.

Volunteers Called For Field Service

A plea for civilian volunteers for overseas duty was recently received from the American field service by Dean Virgil D. Earl, University representative for the group. The work includes driving ambulances and carrying stretchers, and a minimum of 18 months of service after the date of embarkation is required.

Special emphasis was placed on the opening for medically discharged veterans. Other physically able men classified as 4-F, 1-AL, or 1-C, between the ages of 18 and 40 will be accepted. They must be able to pay part of their equipment expenses.

The University has two former students serving in this group.

LIFE Discovers Oregon 'Spirit'

University of Oregon coeds, laughing and shouting, surround Gov. Bricker, Republican vice-presidential candidate, in the 6 by 10-inch picture which spreads across the first page of the news section in this week's Life magazine.

Current Production Repeats Performance By Popular Demand

Lauded by town and campus critics as the best University theater production to date, "The Skin of Our Teeth" will be held over until Thursday night, November 2, for a command performance. Box office reports indicate a sell-out for all three nights this week.

Glenn Hasselrooth, columnist for the Eugene Register-Guard commented on the play: "Last winter this writer asserted that 'The Great God Brown' was Horace W. Robinson's best production within memory. Here that gentleman has further displayed his versatility. 'The Skin of Our Teeth' is his best work so far."

He described Bev Brunton's role of Sabina as "the most eloquent performance of a character glorifying in the grossest and the finest emotions." He further gave orchids to Lewis Vogler and Dorothy Weygandt as Mr. and Mrs. Antrosch, and to Marilyn Rowling and Schubert Fendrick as their "redoubtable offspring."

A kaleidoscopic view of the history of man, this Thornton Wilder comedy represents mankind in its strength and weakness, now hilariously funny, now prophetic. Spe-

Where, Oh, Where?---Pioneers 'Coke Date'

Outside, the grey raindrops are slithering among the dank yellow leaves that writhe in the wind. Here, inside, the clock in the hall mutters darkly to itself. It is 1 a.m. as I sit here, chipping out the weird details of my story.

I was walking quite swiftly through the rain, toward the shack, watching the gaunt, dissipated moon stumble drunkenly through the clouds. It was Hallowe'en night and even my practical, rational soul was shriveled to a frigid, lifeless lump somewhere between my sodden wooden shoes and my sodden kerchief.

The lights in the streetlamps flickered ominously. A long-mournful wail resounded across the campus. That's only Sue St. Pierre's dog trying to get into the Theta house, I told myself, but I knew better.

I began to run, blindly clutching at the wet turf by the library with my wet feet. Something reached out and stopped me. I looked up. I had run into the base of the Pioneer Mother statue. I looked again. Casually I flipped on my face. The statue was gone. No, I said, no, no, no, and started to run again.

My legs, due to P.E. basic, folded under me as I neared Friendly hall. I sank to the lawn . . . sobbing . . .

What I need is a drink, I thought. I ran to the fountain by the law school. What I saw stopped me dead in my anklets.

There beside the drinking fountain stood the Pioneer Mother and the old Pioneer Father. She was standing in the rain, carefully holding her heavy wide skirts up by one hand to keep the hems from dragging in the puddles. He was lounging comfortably against the drinking fountain, the brim of his hat dripping rain down his neck.

"Helluva night to go spookin' around, ain't it maw?" he said companionably.

"You said it, paw, let's forget it (Please turn to page four)

Former Journalist Returns to Campus

Ensign Roy Paul Nelson, U. S. navy, former Emerald columnist, yesterday returned to his old haunts in the shack to reveal to Emerald satellites his life in the service.

Nelson, who illustrated his own column, "Between the Lines," in the 1942-43 Emerald, left the University in June, 1943, to study under the marine corps V-12 program at the University of Southern California. Unwilling to let his journalistic tendencies grow cold in the service, Nelson, while at USC, originated "Private Matters," a column dealing with life in the corps as a lad without chevrons, and also created "Illustrated Short Stories," a series of tales about his brainchild, the three-legged moth.

Nelson accepted a chance for a commission while at Cal, and reported to Asbury Park, N. J., in March, 1944, to be assigned to Northwestern university in Chicago. He received his commission from that school in July, 1944, and was ordered to the amphibian training base at Coronado, Cal. After operations there with small landing craft, Nelson was ordered to his ship, and is passing through Eugene on government orders.

This former manager of the "Oregana" was a Sigma Delta Chi major in journalism, although, he claimed, he would like to be a commercial artist or free lance cartoonist.

When asked for information con-

ISA Charter Change Sought

A movement for the amendment of the ISA constitution is being circulated to the independent students in the form of a petition. ISA senators feel that the ISA executive council should be given a voice in senate discussion and thus enable many vital matters, that would otherwise be killed, to be introduced.

The ISA constitution reads: Amendments must be submitted in a petition signed by at least 100 students. The proposed amendment shall be published in the Emerald on two successive publication days, and be voted on by ballot one week from the date of proposal. A two-thirds majority of the vote cast shall be necessary for the adoption of the assignment.

All independent students are urged to approve this amendment for its adoption means greater effectiveness of the ISA.

ASUO Meet Stars Marie Rogndahl

Singing one of the songs which brought her to the attention of the nation, Marie Rogndahl will keynote the ASUO assembly at 11 a.m. Thursday in McArthur court. The number is entitled "Theme and Variations."

"We would like to see everybody turn out for this assembly to give Marie a big welcome back to Oregon," Audrey Holliday, ASUO president, said.

The rally squad will instruct the assembly in a new group of songs and yells in anticipation of the basketball season, which will begin November 10 and 11.

The importance of the war bond drive will be discussed by Ed Allen. Several numbers will be presented by the Theta quartet, and Joe Grimm has arranged a male act for the assembly.
