News Posts Now Open

Practical experience in learning the processes of publishing a daily newspaper is offered to all old and new students who are interested in working on the Oregon Daily Emerald. All potential "shack-rats" are requested to contact someone in the news office of the Emerald (journalism building behind McClure) this week.

Openings are available on the reporting, copy desk, and night staffs, according to Elizabeth Haugen, managing editor. A new beat list is being made by Marguerite Wittwer, news editor, and all reporters who have special preferences are asked to file them with the news editor before Thursday.

"There are also opportunities for assistant positions to the managing editor and news editor," Miss Haugen revealed.

Wednesday at 8 p.m. there will be a meeting of all editors, copy editors, and editors' assistants in the office of the editor-in-chief, Anne Craven, first floor journalism building.

Thursday at 7:30 p.m. all reporters, head writers, and all students interested in Emerald activities will meet in the news room with the editors and Leonard L. Jermain, graduate assistant in journalism.

Continuing the practice started last term the educational activities board will sponsor a series of weekly free motion pictures to be shown in 207 Chapman. The first showing is scheduled tonight at 7:30, and all students and faculty members are invited.

Candidates will be judged on their poise, personality, charm, and beauty.

'Bull Sessions', Reports From Proxy Offspring, Delight Dean

It seems natural to Mrs. Golda Parker Wickham, newly-appointed acting dean of women, to advise students. Smilingly, she recalls prolonged after hours "bull sessions" with students in her classes in senior English at Eugene high school. And, as girls' dean at Lincoln high school in Portland, she was personally acquainted with each of the 800 girls in the student body.

Mrs. Wickham gives the impression of a person of tolerance and patience, who understands people.

"My philosophy has always been that you get out of life double what you put into it; if you invest happiness, cooperation, friendliness, and sincerity, you will receive those dividends plus interest," she said.

That view of patterns of living is her advice to women entering the University. She adds that for easier orientation, freshmen should observe the rules, begin studying seriously at the beginning of the term, and work with house officers, especially scholarship chairmen.

"The development of good study habits is essential," she affirmed.

Mrs. Wickham expressed the desire to become acquainted with each woman on the campus personally, and she issued a special invitation to discuss any problems with the girls. She seemed especially concerned to help advise coeds whose grades are below average.

Among her chief interests in her new position, Mrs. Wickham lists special attention to raising the house grade averages, and to reduce the number of women who drop school during the year. She approves heartily of morale-raising social functions which involve group cooperation. The new dean mentioned favorably the "big sister" freshman advising plan used in September to help orient incoming girls, the idea introduced by Mick Riley, AWS president.

As a student at the University of Oregon, Mrs. Wickham, an education major who took honors in that subject, worked her way through school by correcting papers and tutoring other students.

Fishing and golf are the chief interests of Mrs. Wickham, and her husband, J. Alan Wickham, formerly superintendent of schools at Halsey, Oregon, and principal of Gilbert school in Portland. Both Wickhams are interested in drama, and they plan to travel extensively after the war. They have no children, but Mrs. Wickham feels that the hundreds of former students who write to her regularly, many of them from battlefronts around the world, are adequate substitutes.

Dr. Calvin Crumbaker, professor of economics, has been detained in eastern Washington because of the serious illness of his mother.

Students enrolled in his classes will meet as usual at the first scheduled hour for announcements of assignments and texts to be made by other members of the staff.

Will Serve As Adviser To Women

Golda Parker (Mrs. J. Alan) Wickham, graduate of the University and former dean of women at Lincoln high school in Portland, has been appointed acting dean of women by Acting President Orlando J. Hollis.

The appointment was made for the remainder of the school year, and is subject to confirmation by the state board of higher education at its next meeting.

Before taking over the desk left vacant by Mrs. Hazel Schwering, dean for 14 years, Mrs. Wickham taught senior English at Eugene high school. Previous to this position she served as dean of women at Lincoln high school in Portland.

"We are very fortunate to be able to obtain the services of Mrs. Wickham, who will carry on while a careful canvass is made of available candidates for permanent appointment," said President Hollis.

A member of "Senior Six," Phi Beta Kappa, Pi Lambda Theta, and active in many campus activities, Mrs. Wickham was graduated by the University in the class of 1931. She majored in the school of education, carried special courses in guidance and personnel, and was graduate assistant to Dr. E. C. A. Lesch of the English department in 1931-32. Before coming to the University she was graduated from the Oregon College of Education at Monmouth and was assistant instructor in mathematics at the Monmouth institution. Mrs. Wickham, a native of Roseburg, Oregon, also attended the University of Minnesota. Her husband, J. Alan Wickham, a University alumnus, teaches at Woodrow Wilson junior high school in Eugene.

Campus Circus Due At Saturday Dance

Gerlinger hall will turn into a circus ballroom Saturday night as the theme for the annual senior ball, "Club 45," is carried out. "Lots of surprises" are promised by Joan Dolph, chairman of the decorations committee. Bill Fisher and his "radio band" from Portland will furnish music, making this the first all-campus dance this year to have a band from the city.

The formal dance will begin at 9 p.m., and end at midnight. One o'clock permission has been granted for the night by the student affair committee. Admission is $1.50 per couple. Tickets will be on sale all week and Saturday night at the dance.

The committee chairmen for the ball were announced Monday by Ardis Jensen, chairman. They are: Joan Dolph, decorations; Bob Schott, promotion; Phyllis Horstman, tickets and programs; Irene Gresham, patrons and patronesses; Katherine Dunn, entertainment; and Bryce Thalman, clean-up.
