International Observer Hopes for Global Unity

By MARGUERITE WITTWER

"How I wish that they could ring in world unity," said Madame Alfred Jonniaux, world traveler and international observer, in an interview Wednesday at the Eugene hotel. She was referring to a pair of tiny gold earrings that tinkled every time she moved her head. Everything in her thinking, it seems, is subjugated to this one aim of her lecture tour across the country: the desire to bring her audiences to an awareness of their part as individuals in the final goal of global organization.

"I really don't have a plan by which world unity could be achieved," she explained. "The object of the lectures is to convince people of the necessity of the cosmopolitan viewpoint regarding international relations. World unity must be political, economic, and cultural. Nations must drop their prejudices; each country has something to give."

Mme. Jonniaux's travels and residence in European countries and the western hemisphere, her native background, and her acquaintance with many of the internationally known personalities that have been painted by her husband, have qualified her to present a lecture both timely and comprehensive.

Mme. Jonniaux was born in England and educated there. She met Alfred Jonniaux in London when he was beginning his career as an artist which reached the climax with his appointment as court painter to Belgium's King Leopold.

"The king and queen were a very devoted couple," Madame recalled. "It was a real love match. Royal marriages are arranged, you know, and when Leopold went to Sweden to meet his betrothed, he saw Princess Estrid and they fell in love. He married her although she had not been originally destined to become the queen of Belgium. They were such a simple and democratic pair. He used to visit the studio constantly when she sat for her

YWCA, YMCA Will Hold Joint Meeting Jan. 24

Douglas Moore, president of the U. of O. chapter of the YMCA, announced Wednesday, after consultation with the YWCA executive board, that the two groups would hold a joint session Wednesday, January 24. Moore said that although during the past year the Y groups have not coordinated on mutual problems, it was with the cooperation idea in mind that the two groups are planning to meet and decide on all-campus activity programs which would include social dancing for men and women students, ping pong tournaments, and other activities.

Joan Dolph, president of the YWCA, while attending summer school at Columbia university last year, participated in joint YM-YW activities there and found them to be successful. She said, "There is no reason why such a program cannot succeed on this campus as well."

'Lawyers' Don't Add Up Claim Business Ad Men

By BOB HULL, GENE LEO, and LEN RAY

The students of the school of business administration would like to respond in kind, herein, to references made by the law school's mouthpiece as to the reputations and policies of business school scholars in yesterday's Emerald. It is desired, also, that the FACTS about the activities of the law school be revealed to the public. It is hoped that misapprehensions caused by lack of knowledge and rationalization on the part of the law school members be rectified.

1. Undoubtedly the thoughts presented by the law school men were born during one of their six-hour "intermissions" at the Side. In any event, Blackstone (or whoever he is) was unhappily being neglected.

2. No comments can be printed concerning the lack of social contacts after interviews were held with the deans of men and women, Panhellenic, and the night watchman.
