

Jean Lawrence Edits Oregana

Jean Lawrence, sophomore in journalism, Tuesday was selected 1945-46 editor of the Oregana by the educational activities board. The appointment is subject to approval by the ASUO executive council.

Miss Lawrence was managing editor of the 1944-45 Oregana and served as editor of this year's Piggers Guide. She has been active in theater work on the campus and is a member of Kwama. Previous to her appointment as Oregana managing editor she was assistant managing editor for the Emerald.

Betty Liu Siegman, junior in journalism and associate editor of the Oregana, and Lois Evans, junior in journalism and associate editor of the Oregana, also applied for the position.

The new editor will begin her work this term.

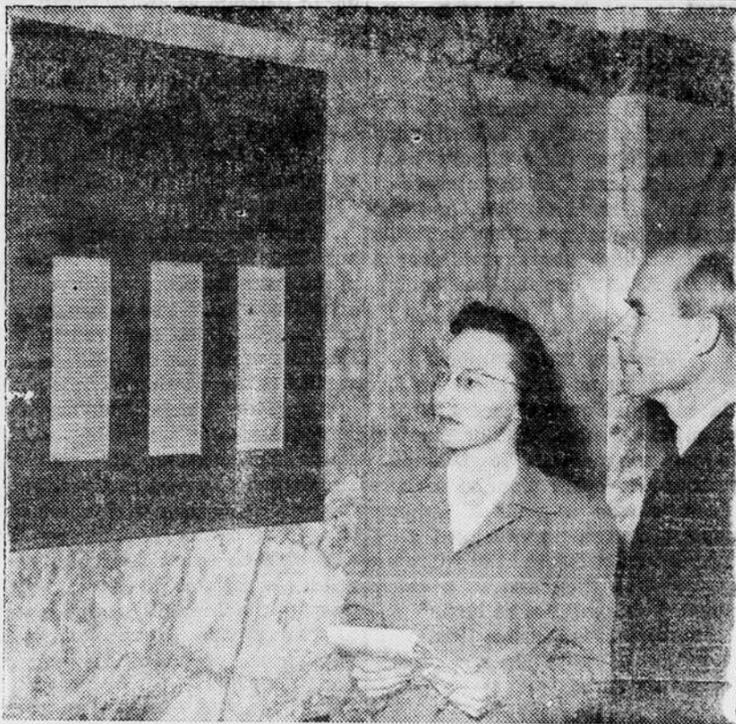

Selection of Emerald editor will be made Wednesday, April 11; the business managers of the Oregana and the Emerald will be chosen Friday, April 13.

'Mardi Gras' Theme Chosen For Junior Weekend Activities

Junior Weekend committee heads went into a huddle late last term to select a theme for the annual Junior Weekend, scheduled for May 4, 5, and 6. The result, Junior Weekend 1945 will be based on the old French celebration "Mardi Gras." Co-chairman Ed Allen announces, "The class of '46 is going ahead with plans to transform the campus into a miniature New Orleans with gay, festive Mardi Gras atmosphere."

All of the old Junior Weekend traditions will be carried out. Already scheduled are the campus luncheon, all-campus sing, terrace dance, junior prom, and sunset serenade, with new additions and surprises promised. ODT regulations prevent the regular schedule of Mothers' Day events, but the executive council of Oregon Mothers will meet in Eugene that weekend.

Co-chairmen Ed Allen and Jean Kirkwood, juniors in pre-law, have selected the following committee chairmen: Dorothy Simonsen, all-campus sing; Ann Van Valzah, campus luncheon; Mary Margaret Ellsworth, coronation; Signe Ecklund, junior prom; Maxine Cady, sunset serenade; Betty Butler, Anita Young, and Ted Loud, publicity; Janet Douglas, tickets; Joanne Holstad, executive secretary; Charlotte Calder, finance; Mary Corrigan, clean-up; and Bob Hamilton, traditions.

UO SERVICE DEAD are honored by this myrtlewood memorial plaque now hanging in Johnson hall. One hundred and thirty-four names of University men and women who have died in World War II were included on the first list.

Plaque Honors World War II Students Lost

The names of 134 University of Oregon men and women who lost their lives while in the armed forces in World War II have been placed on a memorial plaque in Johnson hall.

This myrtlewood plaque, carved by Art Clough, a Eugene wood carver, will be replaced by a permanent bronze marker at the end of the war. Until the final list of names is compiled, printed lists of names will be inserted as official government notices of their deaths are received. This list will not include prisoners of war.

Dean Karl W. Onthank, head of personnel administration, and Nancy Ames, Portland, ASUO president last year, started the movement to secure this plaque at that time.

Complete records of all the more than 5500 men and 200 women University students who are now in the armed services are being kept in the alumni office by Miss Doris Hack, acting alumni secretary.
