New Schedule Set by Museum

Secret lovers of oriental art need no longer sneak out of the house after supper with the excuse of going to the library to study for the Murray Warner collection of Oriental art in the art museum is now open from 3 to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Saturday, and Sunday, as well as from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. on Thursdays. For reading on oriental art or the Pacific basin, the museum library is open the same hours, and from 2 to 5 p.m. every day except Friday. When the museum proper is not open, the back entrance may be used to reach the library.

Classes meeting regularly at the museum are: Alfred F. Whiting's class on the "Peoples of the Pacific," which meets every Tuesday and Thursday, at 11 a.m., and Wallace S. Baldinger's class in painting which meets at the museum at 8 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. Mr. Whiting's class is arranging an exhibit to be shown to the general public during Junior Weekend.

New Spring Clothes

Savinar who gets our award (one large-sized blue and white striped tent canvas shirt with an oh-so-tricky laced up neck, if he hasn't already got one) for being probably the only man on the campus with a white handknit sweater trimmed with a red stripe around its coy v-neck. AND—when and if he ever shows you his dainty ankles you'll see matching sox complete with red stripe!

Now that we've given you the latest on some of your Oregon coeds, we hope you are inspired to don your new spring fashions and throw your winter clothes in the back closet. Come rain or shine, as far as the coeds are concerned, spring has sprung.
