

Today's Assembly To Reveal Plans For Student Union

Gene Conklin, chairman of the student union committee, will be the main speaker at today's assembly, at 11 a.m. in McArthur court. He will discuss the history and future plans of Oregon student union.

A review of what has been done in the past year, and what is being done by the committee at the present time will highlight his talk, which will include suggestions made to him by the students. Dr. W. V. Norris, head of the physics department, who is serving as technical adviser for the student union, has recently returned from a conference with the consulting architects and the results of the meeting will be disclosed by Conklin.

Other features of the assembly will be a skit advertising the Butler's Ball, and a short announcement by Shubert Fendrick.

writings by that author. Any students possessing that collection and willing to sell or lend it to the theater, are asked to notify Mrs. Ottilie T. Seybolt, drama director, at the drama studio or telephone 3874.

Council Meeting Delayed

The meeting of the executive council at which the director of the Oregon Federation was to be chosen was postponed from Wednesday to Tuesday, April 24. The job involves contact work with high school graduates, and since much of this work is done through the alumni office, Miss Doris Hack, acting alumni secretary, will attend the meeting to help consider petitions.

campus are the important things which will stick with you in the years after you graduate," he said. "If you slide through school now and try to get by with as little work as possible, you will have to overcome those undesirable habits when you enter the business and professional world."

The radio man pointed out that knowledge and training gained through college experience is transferred to post-graduation life. He cited the example of rushing: "You try to sell your sorority to the rushee," he said, "and the same principle works later in business—you try to sell life insurance or advertising or what have you."

Abbott advocates the acquisition of a well-rounded education. "Develop the ability to do more than is required," he suggested. "Form the habit of an inquisitive mind; dig for detail, follow through on all the angles; get the habit of applying yourself."

"However," Abbott believes, "the person who has not engaged in student body activities will leave the University with his education only partly completed. Everyone should participate in extra-curricular work, but activities should not be allowed such prominence in your schedule that they become the tail that wags the dog."

Learn Leadership

It is through activities that the student learns leadership, how to get along with people, to develop his personality to the greatest extent possible, the former newspaperman continued.

In college the student prepares for business or professional life which, after graduation, usually proves to be only a continuation of skills acquired while in school. When the individual participates in activities which relate to his chosen field, he is already putting into practice what is being learned in the classroom. In this way, Abbott emphasized, the student is making himself ready to start out in professional life immediately upon graduation.

Going Up

The logic of this argument became clear when Abbott revealed that he had worked as a reporter on the Eugene Register, daily morning newspaper, during his years at the University and also served as campus correspondent for the Oregon Journal. With this background, his record of activities, and his Emerald work, Abbott went into professional newspaperwork immediately after the tassel-tossing ceremony, and now, as KALE promotion chief, is still on the road going up.
