Seventh War Loan Campaign Starts Today; Goal $60 Per

By MARILYN SAGE

Today, throughout the world, official V-E day is being hailed as the next-to-last step in the second world war. Today the University of Oregon begins its biggest war loan drive. Students need no further incentive to carry out the quota set for them than the unconditional surrender of Germany. The war is not over—the demolition of Japan has just begun. Fighting men still need supplies, transportation, and weapons, which must be paid for by their countrymen at home. The united effort of the American people in this, the seventh war loan drive, will play an important part in the last push to victory.

As in previous bond campaigns, the government is depending upon the colleges and universities of the United States to help raise the funds so greatly needed. During the first week of the sixth war loan drive, Oregon campus sales

Students Disregard Classes, Pile High on Parade Wagons

By MARGUERITE WITTEW

"The Yanks are coming, the Yanks are coming . . ."
"Pile on, kids, this is V-E day . . ."
"Hey, get that flag!"

Expressing their joy over the news that Germany had surrendered unconditionally to the Allied nations, hundreds of University students yesterday morning turned all-out to lead the victory parade through the campus and downtown streets. Disregarding the protests of some faculty members, all but a few class-conscious students, joined the rally which lasted from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. for some of the more enthusiastic celebrants.

" . . . the drums, drums, drumming everywhere . . ."
" . . . we fight our country's battles on the land as on the sea . . ."
"Up in the air . . ."

Headed by a carful of screaming coeds, several drums and cymbals, and Rally Squadleader Evans Sax running from car to car shouting directions, the parade formed on

RETURN FLAGS

Flags, taken from the streets by students for the parade should be returned to avoid ill feeling, V. D. Earl, dean of men, urges. They should be left at the Eugene fire station, for the fire department has offered to see that they are returned to owners.

Dr. Noble to Speak At V-E Assembly

Celebrating University students will assemble in McArthur court at 10 this morning in honor of V-E day in Europe and the opening of the seventh war loan drive.

Emphasis at the ASUO-sponsored assembly will center on the Pacific theater of war still to be finished, Audrey Holliday, student body president announced. In line with this theme

Council to Meet

The ASUO executive council will meet at 4 p.m. today in Johnson hall.

Dr. Harold J. Noble, associate professor of history, who returned this year from overseas service in the marine corps, will speak on the war in the Pacific. He will be introduced by Karl W. Onthank, dean of personnel.

Bernice Cranquist, chairman of the campus seventh war loan drive, will officially open the drive for $108,000 in bonds and stamps, the UO quota.

Feature of the assembly will be roll call of all campus living organizations for the total house purchases of war stamps during the assembly. The blue sweatered Minute Maids will be on hand to sell stamps and during the roll call a representative from each living organization will announce the house's total purchases for the morning. Chairman of the Minute Maids is Phyl Perkins.

Classes ordinarily held at 10 a.m. will be moved to the 11 o'clock period, Dean Onthank announced.
