Postwar Government in Germany . . .

Army Colonel To Tell ETO Experiences

By BETTY ROBERTSON
"If you can keep your sense of humor overseas, you're all right," says tall, gray-haired Lt. Col. James Conville who will speak at the ASUO assembly Thursday in McArthur court on postwar government in Germany.

"There was once in St. Lo when I was dashing to a ditch for protection against point-blank artillery fire that I stumbled into a mass of telephone wires on the ground, became completely caught in them and couldn't get out to save my life. Then a couple of Jerry planes came over strafing, and I swear the only reason they didn't shoot at me was because they thought I was dead. The other fellows yelled that I'd see it through and not to worry. A sense of humor is a great thing."

Four Stars

He wears four campaign stars on his ETO ribbon and took part with the first army in the campaigns in England, Normandy, Belgium, Luxembourg, Holland, and Germany. "I didn't stay in any one place very long," he said. "We set up A.M.G. (American Military Government) organizations in the towns and left someone else to do the job."

After serving in the European theater of operations for more than two and a half years, Col. Conville returned to the United States two months ago, and is expecting a discharge soon. He will then return to his home in Astoria, where he was formerly city manager.

Col. Conville took part in World War I and retained his reserve commission until September 14, 1940, when he was again called into (Please turn to page four)
