Dick Wilkins and Gil Roberts, sophomore and junior representatives respectively, were unable to attend the assembly.

Gifts were presented by Audrey Holliday, outgoing ASUO president, to this year's executive council members, Phyllis Horstman, Jean Taylor, Bob Schott, Alyson Hales, Joe Grimm, Phyllis Evans, Florence Hintzen, and Douglas Moore. Gene Conklin, junior representative for the past year, was not present at the assembly.

Glamor and glory have come quickly to Rise Stevens, young American singing star of opera, concert, radio and motion picture fame, who will be heard here Saturday evening at 8:15 p.m. in McArthur court under the auspices of the Eugene Civic Music association. Association members and holders of student body cards only will be admitted.

At ten Rise Stevens sang on the radio, in her middle teens in an opera comique series, and at nineteen started serious vocal work with Mme. Schoen-Rene, supplemented by a three-year course at the Juilliard School of Music. In 1935, the New York-born songstress was a semi-finalist in the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air, but never participated in the actual finals because of her decision to go abroad for further study.

A year later she made her operatic debut at the Prague Opera house in the title role of "Mignon" and following this, she sang in opera in Vienna, Cairo, and Buenos Aires. English audiences heard her for the first time when she sang before Queen Mary at the Glyndebourne music festival that same year. She was now ready for the Metropolitan and made her debut as Octavian in "Rosenkavalier."

Miss Stevens will be accompanied by Paul Ulanowsky at the piano.

NOTICE

University registration cards, possessed by each student, serve as admission tickets to the Rise Stevens concert Saturday. However, all students are warned by the educational activities office to observe the stipulation printed on the cards that the cards are not transferable. Students using other cards than their own will be deprived of them at the door.

Two Women Win Poetry Contest

Co-winners in the annual $25 Julia Burgess poetry prize competition are Audrey Mathews and Claudine Biggs, announced Ernest J. Moll, acting head of the English department Thursday. After a careful consideration of all manuscripts submitted, the judges decided that two poems were so equal in literary value that the prize should be divided between them. This competition, which closed May 12, was open to upper division students.

Miss Mathews, senior in sociology, will share the prize for her poem "To J.S." with Miss Biggs, junior in English, for her poem "Foothill."

Though some manuscripts of considerable merit were submitted in the $15 Walter Evans Kidd poetry contest, the judges felt that no manuscript achieved the prize standard. It was open to lower division students only.

Morris Believes In UNCIO Success

By KAREN MARTIN

"My general impression of the United Nation's conference at San Francisco was one of confusion and perhaps depression, but a certainty that the charter for a world organization which they will draw up will work," declared James M. Morris, director of the KOAC school of the air, to a group of townspeople and students Thursday night.

"The charter which comes out of the conference may not be perfect," continued Mr. Morris, brother of Dean V. P. Morris, "but it will have provisions for the changes that must be made to meet new problems as they develop."

Mr. Morris outlined the set-up at the conference; the steering committee composed of Stettinius, Molotov, Eden and Soong; the executive committee composed of the chairman of all 49 nations (including the representatives from Argentina, White Russia and the Ukraine); and the plenary sessions composed of all the delegates, the press and the radiomen.

He then painted clear pictures of the more prominent delegates. "Stettinius appeared to us to be very, very able. He's a gracious man, and knows many reporters by
