Museum Buys Bird Collection

Purchase of a rare collection of Oregon birds, eggs and nests, owned by Dr. A. G. Prill, Scio, for the University of Oregon Museum of Natural History has been announced by President Harry K. Newburn.

The collection, of particular interest because it contains many varieties of birds now extinct, was gathered over a period of many years by Dr. Prill and has been completely catalogued. It includes approximately 1600 bird skins and sixty-four mounted birds in addition to 1875 sets of Oregon bird eggs, 300 foreign sets, and 200 bird nests. The collection also contains an extensive library on birds and many photographs, some of which are colored.

Dr. Prill has listed among the specimens of unusual interest the little yellow rail, first and only on record in Oregon; black swift, first Oregon record; great gray owl, the largest of the species; Harris sparrow, an eastern bird, third on Oregon record; Oregon ringed pheasant, two western robins, and one Brewer's sparrow, all albinos."

Dr. Prill gave a similar collection to the University a number of years ago, which with this later group makes an invaluable source of study material for students and anthropologists.

Audrey Wishart, both of Portland; Diane Barnhart, Eugene; Shirley Crump, Geraldine Dostalick, Grants Pass; Nancy Hoerlein, Hood River; Marcelyn Wiggins, Sharon Wilsh, Klamath Falls; Dolores Marritt, Port Orford; Salley Bates, Roseburg; Dorothy Lee, Salem; Pat Zumwalt, Sixes; Marybeth Stranahan, Tillamook; Frances Budo, Eleanor Barnard, Sally Evans, all of Piedmont, Cal.; Geneal Cowan, Boise, Idaho; Veda Nicholes, Caldwell, Idaho; Pauline Fugate, Aberdeen, Wash.; and Carol Jean Kaull, Ogden, Utah; Verla George, Long Beach, Cal.; Eleanor Zapitini, Piedmont, Cal. Maxine Knorr.

Dr. A E. Caswell Returns To Physics Department

His work completed in the development of radar, Dr. A. E. Caswell, head of the physics department, is back on the campus after 39 months' absence. Dr. Caswell worked from June 1942 until August 1945 in the radiation laboratory at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, where he participarted in a radar project. The first two months of his job was in secret developmental work. He then was shifted to the division which prepared instruction books on operation and maintenance of "crash" radar sets.

"We compiled handbooks," Dr. Caswell said on his return "on nearly all the important sets built. One of the sets compiled by the radiation lab and for which we supplied the instruction book was one which made it possible to bomb Germany day and night for six days a week, when before it was feasible to do precision bombing maybe one day a week."

Radar, he explained, enables the pilot to make exact location of his target in spite of smoke or clouds. It also shows him when to drop his bombs in order to hit the target squarely.

Many Workers

During the peak work at M.I.T., there were 3800 civilian and 1200 military personnel. About 80 per cent of all the original work done on radar, the physicist said, was done at M.I.T. and 90 per cent of the development has taken place there.

As for peacetime applications, Dr. Caswell believes that radar should be compulsory on all commercial passenger planes and undoubtedly all the larger airports will have it for landing purposes. There is a possibility of using radar on fishing crafts to chart the shore lines and avoid accidents.

Dr. Caswell said that he intended to use his knowledge of radar in teaching as soon as the government released the information. Some parts of radar information have been released and can probably be used in the classroom, but other developments will not be given out until later or possibly not at all.

Dr. Caswell has been on the University faculty most of the time since 1913. During his last two years at M.I.T., he was chief of his section.

Ore-nters Distributed

For the second year, the Ore-nter, a handbook answering many questions on and giving information on University life, is being distributed to students at registration.

This year's Ore-nter, edited by Lois Evans, contains the history, traditions, and songs of the University. Also included are degree and honorary society requirements, the ASUO constitution and by-laws, where to go in Eugene and on the campus, tips on dressing, dating, and a bevy of useful information on every phase of campus life.

Assisting Miss Evans were Ray Beeson, Elizabeth Gilmore, Carolyn Jacobs, Dorothy Habel, Gloria Grenfell, Margaret Metcalf, Barbara Johns, and L. L. Jermain.
