

D. Samuels Joins Staff

Straight from federal intelligence work, Daniel G. Samuels, visiting associate professor in the department of languages, arrived on the campus this fall.

Born in Brooklyn, New York, Dr. Samuels did his graduate work at Columbia university, where he received his master's and doctor's degrees. Although most of his classes are in Spanish, the professor is able to speak French, Spanish, Portuguese, and German. The first three are his favorites. The doctor revealed that he has taught English to Spaniards and is assuring that they have equally as many problems in conquering a foreign language as do the Americans.

Travelled Much

Dr. Samuels has traversed many foreign lands including France, Spain, and Porto Rico, but this is his first visit to Oregon. He is overwhelmed at the hospitality shown and the welcome help offered by Oregonians.

In his statement the professor exclaimed, "I have found Oregon students eager, intelligent, and most courteous. Being a football fan, I shall be watching for their team's victory over Washington this weekend."

A Hollywood star was somewhat sensitive when she applied for her license for her fifth marriage.

The clerk who made out her marriage license began to ask the routine questions:

"Have you been married before, and if so, to whom?"

The air became zero, and in her most freezing manner she demanded, "What is this, a memory test?"

Twenty Years Ago On the Campus

In 1925, the Big Sister Movement was forwarded for the first time at Oregon. With a chairman to head the whole movement, the real sisterly work was done by 100 "lieutenants" who were to advise and help the freshmen girls as much as possible.

The first day of registration showed the largest enrollment of new students in the history of the University. A total of 1077 registered.

An editorial column in fall term, 1925, commented: The big problem in clothes this year is "what shall milady omit to wear?" It looks as if the style designers started with nothing for an idea and pulled with the same thing.

The theater program proudly announced: THE REX—Hoot Gibson in "The Saddle Hawks," a galloping tale of lariats and love amid the splendors of Oregon's own range.

And the Mac hailed big specials all coming soon—Charles Chaplin in "The Gold Rush," John Barrymore in "The Sea Beast," and Mary Pickford in "Little Annie Rooney." Their slogan—"A movie a day, keeps the blues away."

Ray P. Bowen, Robert D. Horn, Howard R. Taylor, and Dr. Fred N. Miller were listed among the 29 new members added to the faculty.

The Tri-Delts, ATO's, and Kappas moved into new houses, their present locations.

Oregon's football coach, Dick Smith, urged every student to come out and watch football practice. And he recalled, "Back in the good old days every girl in the University turned out to watch the team practice in the pouring rain out on old Kincaid street."

A $25,000 unit of the new grandstand was being built at Hayward field.

Ye Campa Shoppe advertised two big grill dances, one featuring the Aggie Aggravators and the other the Pi-ed Pipers.

And the newest dance records were "Yes, Sir! That's My Baby," "Everything Is Hotsy-Totsy Now," and "I'm Going to Charleston, Back to Charleston."

And then there was that artist who worked his way through college by painting eyes on students' eyelids so they could sleep in class.
