Last Saturday the Lemon and Green team faced a tricky Vandal eleven on Hayward field with odds strictly in favor of the local ball club. All Webfoot fans who saw this 33-7 one-sided affair had the opportunity to see a Leicht-ning style of football antics. As was mentioned in this column last week Oregon's offensive threat was made up of Bobbie Reynolds and Jake Leicht, these two inspirational backs of Tex Oliver's.

Another fellow who cannot be overlooked is Walt Donovan, right half. Although sports writers acclaimed Leicht the star of the game, Walt carried the mail for an average of 10.5. Besides his running all over the field, Donovan went over for six points on a cut back. One of the finest runs of the afternoon was also turned in by this freshman; a burst through right tackle was good for 49 yards.

With 36 men seeing action, not all the squad can be mentioned in this collection of pot-pourri, but all those hard-hitting players are best remembered not as individuals, but as one of the finest teams yet to be seen this season on the Pacific coast. It may be a little early in the season to pick the Rose Bowl selection, but this column picks the Ducks as a very prominent contestant. With Reynolds and Leicht, who are equals of Durdan and Dethman of Beaver fame in '41, why can't the locals take on this task of making the Bowl this year? No reason at all as far as we know.

Something we would like to see more of is the plan Phil Sorboe, coach at Washington State, has. Phil has labeled all his backs with numerals of two letters and the line labeled from one to seven starting with right end. It would clear up much questioning on the part of spectators and writers alike if this were adopted by the conference bigwigs. From the questions floating around us in the stands it would make the game more interesting if the fans knew a little more about the players, or if they could at least know who was who.

Just so enthusiastic fans won't get over-confident about the OSC-Oregon game this Friday, we would like to mention a little fact seen in Greg's Gossip. It concerned the insulted Orangemen so much they took their taunters in the next two games. Oh yes, the vanquished were the Cougars of Washington university. It could happen to us if we got too confident next Saturday, so let's don't.

Well if you are going to Corvallis (and who isn't) take a little friendly advice and get your tickets now if you want to get into the game. The picking will be pretty lean in a few more days and Oregon fans certainly want to be there ready for the big game on Bell field.

Sophomore Petitions

Petitions for sophomore representative on the ASUO council are now being accepted by Janet Douglas, Hendricks hall, Ed Allen, ASUO president, announced last night. The opening for this position was caused by Dick Wilkins' ineligibility. Any sophomore in good standing may petition, and must turn in his eligibility slip from the dean of men or women's office to Miss Douglas before October 17.

Three New Members At Dance

Highlight of the "Kick Off" dance at McArthur court Saturday, October 6, came when Jim Ellison, Jim Kroder, and Floyd Stapp were tapped for membership in Skull and Dagger by members of the sophomore men's honorary. The 375 dancing couples stood by when Emcee Bob Moran turned the program over to Deane Bond who announced the new members. Art Holman and his 11-piece orchestra contributed the music for the victory dance.

"The 'Kick Off' was an introduction to the glittering postwar world we've all been hoping for," Deane Bond, Skull and Dagger president said. "We hope that future dances will be as successful."

Pennants, symbols of other western colleges, and colorful megaphones adorned the walls, while green and yellow goal posts stood at either end of the court. Yard markers encircled the dance area.

Trojans, Cougars Named As Teams to Beat This Season

Pacific Coast football goes into high gear this Saturday after a touchdown dizzy weekend that turned the championship race into a two team affair.

As of this date, it's Southern California in the south, and Washington State in the north. With two wins each, they share the top berth, neither defeated nor tied. The war born schedule failed to match these two, leaving the possibility that they may tie for the title. The play-off in December could be the result!

Washington State walked over Idaho 43-12 in their initial game and tramped Oregon State 33-0 last week. Phil Sorboe, former Washington State backfield star is coaching his alma-mater this season, succeeding colorful Orin (Babe) Hollingberry. Employing the use of a tricky "T" formation, Coach Sorboe's Cougars have become the highest scoring team of the northern conference.

Saturday, the Cougars take on the Washington Huskies. Washington suffered a 27-14 tromping last week from a rejuvenated University of California squad. Unless it's talented, but still green, freshman players show great improvement it will run second to W.S.C. this week.

Another top conference contest will pit California against its southern cousin, U.C.L.A., in Cals own backyard. These two rivals share the dubious distinction of having lost to Southern Cal, the defending champion. Off previous records they look to be fairly even opponents. The Golden Bears of California made a spectacular comeback against Washington after dropping contests to both St. Mary's college and U.S.C.

The third conference game this week puts Oregon, 33-7 winner over Idaho, against Oregon State, soundly tromped by Washington State. Oregon, which lost its league opener to the Huskies, 20-6, is greatly strengthened by the return of Jake Leicht, star halfback of the 4th Air Force.

Atomic Bomb Discussion Headed by Dr. Caswell

Several members and graduate assistants of the chemistry department will leave Friday to attend the regional meeting of the American Chemical Society to be held at the University of Washington in Seattle, October 20.

Dr. John M. McGee and Dr. Pierre Van Rysselberghe of the department will present two joint papers at the meeting. They will be entitled, "Electrolysis of Organic Solution of Magnesium Perchlorate" and "Polarographic Studies on Carbon Dioxide and Chlorophyll."

At the general session, the members will hear about the atomic bomb plant at Hanford, Wash. The meeting, sponsored by the Puget Sound, Oregon, and Washington-Idaho border sections of the society, is held partially to replace the two national meetings cancelled because of wartime restrictions. Members from British Columbia will also participate.
