

Eric W. Allen Memorial Fund Trustees Will Hold Meeting Friday To Draw up By-Laws Discussion of Journalistic Projects To Be Taken by Board Friday

The Eric W. Allen Memorial fund, a fund for the advancement of journalism, is getting underway with a meeting of the board of trustees to be held Friday in the office of President Harry K. Newburn. Officers will be elected and a discussion of by-laws for the fund, established in memory of the late dean of the school of journalism, is on the docket. Consideration of possible projects will also be undertaken.

The object of the fund is to advance the science and art of journalism, particularly in the state of Oregon; to establish and support research projects in the field of newspaper practice; to stimulate and foster the study and analysis of state, national and world conditions affecting the press and its working members; to establish scholarships, fellowships and lectureships in the professional field of journalism. Also to make the gifts to the state of Oregon for the purpose of improving the physical facilities at the University of Oregon school of journalism, and for the purpose of advancing and promoting generally the education and training of journalism students at the University of Oregon; to receive gifts or personal property and real property from any source and to use said gifts or the income therefrom for the purpose set forth.

"Anyone wishing to contribute to the school of journalism may do so," George Turnbull, acting dean, said. "Their gifts will be handled by the new organization. Scholarships, lectureships, fellowships and professorships may be administered with this fund."

Members of the board of trustees for the Eric W. Allen endowment fund are: Dr. Newburn, representing the University, Mr.

Time Film Shows Overseas Work

Motion pictures of 14 cities where Time magazine is published overseas, with special attention to Honolulu, will be shown in 207 Chapman hall at 4 this afternoon. Hunter Van Sicklen, Oregon journalism alumnus, will bring the film here from his headquarters in Portland and give the incidental talk in connection with the picture.

The process of preparing photographs for the presses and also of distributing them for printing in the magazine also will be shown.

The program is expected to last about 40 minutes. All interested are invited, it was announced at the school of journalism Wednesday.

Hilyard House Entertains?

A GI's dream come true—Hilyard house answered just that description last night, when in a slight mixup the house calendar and the Emerald calendar came to a parting of the ways.

The dream-girls, lovely girls everywhere, soft music and even softer leather couches, all gathered gracefully in one house at one time for the entertainment of their male guests.

"We had open house scheduled on our calendar for Thursday, October 11," explained Phyllis Kiste, house vice president, "but the Emerald said it would be Wednesday, October 10. So, we had open house on Wednesday, because the Emerald is never wrong."

Mill Race Gets Four Beavers

In response to the burning of "UO" on the football field at Corvallis, last night a large "OSC" was burned in Hayward field. The four guilty Oregon State students were thrown in the mill race by students who turned out when they heard that the campus was being invaded by the old rival.

Guards on duty all night kept the "O" from being painted orange. A fire alert system called students at 1:00 a.m. to fight off the intended painters.

The large "OSC" stands out boldly from the 20 yard line south to the 40 yard line north and parallel to the side lines. The four responsible were caught just as they set fire to the gasoline and attempted to leave.

Three carloads of "OSC" students made the trip from Corvallis to keep alive the rivalry that has existed since founding of the two schools.

To date no organized resistance on the campus against "OSC" raids has been reported.

Prep Editors Revive Meet At UO Nov. 24

George S. Turnbull, acting dean of the school of journalism, announced yesterday that the annual Oregon high school press conferences, sponsored by the University of Oregon school of journalism will be resumed after a recess of two years. Scheduled for Nov. 24, this year's conference will last one day instead of two as in former years, he stated.

Discussion of high school papers and their problems will be crowded into a one-day program, said Mr. Turnbull. Participating in discussions will be staff members of the various papers. A luncheon will be arranged at John Straub hall under the supervision of Mrs. Genevieve Turnipseed, director of dormitories, rather than the usual banquet, Dean Turnbull added.

This meeting will be the nineteenth annual conference, the first being held here in 1923. During the depth of depression, two meetings were omitted, and two more were left out during the recent war emergency. A two-day conference will again be scheduled next year, or as soon as conditions permit, declared Mr. Turnbull.

Last OHSPA officers are: Moshe Lenske, Lincoln high school, Portland, president; Doris Spearow, Washington high school, Portland, secretary. Miss Spearow is now a junior at the University.

Dance at OSC

A no-date sport dance will be held at the Memorial Union ballroom at Oregon State college Saturday night, according to the Barometer, OSC's student newspaper. Regular general admission prices will be charged for the dance, open to University of Oregon students, but these prices have not yet been revealed here. A Salem band will provide music for the dance, part of the school's annual Dad's Day program, and will play from 8:30 until 11:30.

Dr. Souers Will Deliver Assembly Speech Today Mysterious Professor Gives No Assembly Information

"The Oregonian Harmony," the mystery title that has the campus baffled, will be the subject of Dr. Philip W. Souers assembly talk today at 11 o'clock in Mac court. The subject matter is unrevealed as yet, but Dr. Souers promises it to be "subtle." Dr. Souers, who attended the University of Iowa and received his doctor of philosophy degree from Harvard, formerly taught at Newcomb college, Tulane university, in New Orleans.

He is the author of several articles and a book, and belongs to the National Council of Teachers of English, the Modern Language association, and other literary organizations. His special interest is medieval literature, and he is now teaching Renaissance literature.

"Dr. Souers has a rare sense of humor and sparkling wit," said Karl Onthank, dean of personnel administration and a member of the assembly committee.

An all-faculty assembly, the meeting is sponsored by the University teachers, and the speaker will be introduced by Harry K. Newburn, president of the University.

Rose Zena Latta, junior in music, will open the assembly by singing the "Laughing Song," by Strauss.

Vesper Choir Gives Review

Curious students listened from the steps of the library Tuesday evening as the Vesper choir gave a short preview of their part in the YWCA Recognition service to be held tonight at 8 in front of the art museum.

"The preview was a promise, which shall be fulfilled beautifully this evening as the service for recognition of the new YWCA members takes place," said chairman Bjorg Hansen.

Progressing from the back of the art museum library, the students led by a YWCA cabinet member will form a circle in front of the museum. There cabinet members will light the candles held by all the new student members of the YWCA.

Following this pattern of lights, will be a dedication read by YWCA President Mary Corrigan. Lois Greenwood, YWCA executive chairman, will conduct a responsive reading. In conclusion, YWCA officers will unite in reading a dedication to purpose. The entire YWCA, made up of old and new members will then repeat the purpose of their organization, while holding high their flames of light.

Making their first appearance this year on the campus, will be members of the Vesper choir directed by Jonette King. At the close of the service, the Vesper choir will sing the Oregon Pledge song.

All new members of the YWCA are urged to attend this traditional ceremony, and any past members of the YWCA who are interested in seeing again the candle-light ceremony are invited to be present.

Vesper Choir Lists Members For New Year

Vesper choir director, Johnette King, announced Tuesday the members of the 1945-46 Vesper choir. Try outs were held Monday and the choir's first practice was Tuesday evening.

SURE IT'S RIGHT?

Any student who wishes to make an address change before the "Piggers' Guide" (University student directory), goes to press, should go to the registrar's office in Johnson hall and make the change as soon as possible. If you have reason to believe you have made any mistakes in your phone number or address—correct this at once! It will be to your advantage.

Annual Fire Marshal Inspection Continues in University Houses

Being inspected this week for fire hazards are all houses, living organizations, and student boarding houses affiliated with the University. An annual inspection, this year's tour is being conducted by M. J. Gilson, state fire marshal, and Lester Barker, city fire marshal.

Following the inspection, which started Tuesday and will continue till all quarters have been inspected, an inspection of all University buildings will be conducted. An inspection is held near the beginning of each school year, the local chief stated, and a recheck is made later in the same term. This second inspection is made as a check to see if the house has acted upon the advice of the department, and will be qualified to pass any future inspection.

Primarily, Chief Gilson said, the officers are looking for any "life hazards," that is, a means of emergency escape from any menace, as

AWS to Entertain Honorary Officer

All co-eds are invited to the AWS tea this afternoon at 4 honoring Mrs. Coral Stevens, national president of Mortar Board. Campus clothes are in order.

The tea will be held in the AWS room on the third floor of Gerlinger. Guests should enter by the north door, across from Hendricks hall, because of other functions scheduled for Gerlinger Thursday. Mrs. Stevens will speak on three principles of Mortar Board, "Scholarship, Leadership, and Service."

Members of Kwama, Phi Theta, and Mortar Board will serve.

Tonight Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Audrey Clemens, who is accompanying her on her tour of inspection, will meet with the University chapter of Mortar Board.
