

Students Rate Five Weekends Each Quarter

Students are allowed to go home or leave the campus five times during the term, the dean of women's office announced recently.

The first weekend after registration (but before school actually began) is not regarded as one of the three times a student is allowed to leave the campus, and students who went home that weekend may sign out three more times. All students are permitted to go home three times, except those on scholastic probation (GPA below a 2.00.) The other time home is Thanksgiving vacation, November 22-25.

Rules applying to sign-out procedure (although subject to revision soon) state that students must have written permission from parents to go long distances (this includes trips to see boy friends or fiancés), and to attend out-of-town football games and the like, and that this permission must be sent to the dean of women's office and filed there before students leave town. Specific permission is required for each such time off campus. The permission card from the student's parents, which is filed the freshman year, is sufficient when a student is going home.

Students who want to attend out-of-town football games for the day only do not have to sign out with the dean of women, but do have to sign out with the house-mother or head resident, it was announced.
