Latest fiction books are available in the library, renting for two cents a day or 10 cents a week.

Among those recommended are a number of novels with foreign setting. "Rooster Crows for Day," by Ben Burman, is an authentic novel of equatorial Africa and should be enjoyable. Fourth in the Hornblower series is "Commodore Hornblower" by Cecil Forester, a story about the Napoleonic wars.

Historical Novel

Highly recommended is an exciting historical novel, "The Black Rose," by Thomas B. Costain, a story moving from England after the Crusades to the Orient of Kubla Khan. Centering around the fall of the holy city in the 12th century is Zofia Kossack's, "The Leper King," about Baldwin IV who, though dying with leprosy, lead his army to battle.

Swiss Alps

Much on the order of "Lost Horizon," is James Ramsey Ullman's "The White Tower." Set in the Alps of Switzerland, it is the strange tale of six people who for different reasons desire more than anything else in the world to climb the "White Tower," a mountain from which no climber has ever returned.

Other stories of interest are the "O. Henry Memorial Award Prize Stories of 1945," published by Doubleday Doran, and two novels of the South. "Three O'Clock Dinner," by Pinckney, deals with an old aristocratic Southern family and a new household just moved to the South. It is the Literary Guild selection for September. "Pride's Way," by Robert Malloy, is set in the Charleston of 1910, and is about two elderly sisters and their many quarrels.

For those enjoying plays, "Carmen Jones" by Oscar Hammerstein II, based on Meilhac and Halevy's "Carmen," is offered. It enjoyed a long run on the Broadway stage.

Phi Betas Hold Rush Tea

Meeting of the Alpha Chi Omega house last Thursday evening, Phi Beta actives and alumni were hostesses at a rush tea for approximately 75 women enrolled in music, dance, and drama at the University.

Each rushee listed her previous schooling, experience, and in what she is enrolled at the present time. Afterwards, each was given a copy of "Baton," the national publication, which records the activities of all chapters in the United States.

Later in the evening a musical program was presented by June Johnson, Rose Zena Latta, Janet Schafers, and Patricia Metcalf. All accompaniments were by Patricia Metcalf.

Following the musical portion of the program, refreshments were served by the members of Phi Beta.

The new national president, Mrs. Lotta Carl of Eugene, was present.

All new pledges will be formally pledged into the honorary this coming Thursday evening, Nov. 1.

In 1885 Otto Mergenthaler took out a United States patent for a slug casting machine, which was the forerunner of the modern linotype and enabled one man to set the quantity of type formerly set by five or six.

No, you can never do that. They can't be refuted because they never do anything. They are always calm and collected because they never accept responsibility. Hence they have nothing to worry about.

Just the fact that they are alive and gracing us by living among us is enough.

Working Up

Such critics aren't to be confused with those who start at the bottom of the subject they intend to criticize and work their way up. These latter critics are human just like us. They criticize football players after playing football, speech makers after making speeches, etc. They are, however, in the minority.

The other critics are fruitful and multiply much more rapidly.

Perhaps that's because the formula they follow is so easy to

United Egg Layers of US Cackle Past 14 Billion

Our hens laid fourteen billion eggs in the United States last year. To our way of thinking that is a lot of hen fruit. People living in this great country of ours should be pardonably proud of our chickens, yet the American laying hen has been maligned, shoved around, cursed by the Russians, and in general supremely pushed about. Our producers of the other half of "ham and," to put it bluntly, have been given a dirty deal by the OPA, our allies, and the American public at large.

Day in and day out through the war years, our hens have continued to put out the goods. For instance: if the entire supply of hen fruit produced last year was laid end to end around the equator, it would go around the world three times. (Our figures are based on the fact that the average egg is two inches long—does not include ostrich eggs). That, my friends, would be a lot of scrambled eggs.

Rough on the Chicken

The OPA had the audacity, despite their good record, to make follow. It takes no effort at all. They merely watch, read or hear about someone doing something; and if they don't understand it, it automatically stinks.

our hens point free, regardless of the fact that while people were having chicken for Sunday dinner because they were point free, the highly-touted red point hogs, cattle, and sheep laid around dying of old age.

The great American egg has become one of our institutions, without which, many people believe we could not long survive. In our time of need then hens bravely carried on. We might learn some lessons from the egg.

Laying Pays

We have a plan to pay off the national debt in a few years if the egg is used. All that is required is some simple economics, ten new bureaus in Washington, confiscation of all laying hens in captivity, and lots of eggs. Instead of taxing so heavily the government could sell eggs at the rate of twelve dollars a dozen. Thus if fourteen billion eggs were laid last year, it would mean a total of fourteen billion dollars into the coffers of the national treasury.

From the foregoing, dear reader, you can see that either I am nuts, or you are.

One thing you must say about Japs. They had enough sense to get in out of the uranium.

Unaffiliated Coeds Get Oregana Page

Unaffiliated women students who wish to have their pictures in the Oregana may sign up at the Side between 1 and 5 today. Jean A. Yoder, editor of the yearbook, announced Monday. The price for each picture will be $1.00.

The money will be collected when the students sign today, but if 33 women do not register for the page, the money will be refunded, for there will not be sufficient funds to finance the page, Mrs. Yoder said.

Unaffiliated men who have not signed up may do so at this time, the editor concluded.

Students Appointed to Assembly Committee

John Ruble, junior in liberal arts, Nancy Bedingfield, sophomore in journalism, and Virginia Harris, junior in journalism, yesterday were appointed to the student approval committee for ASUO assemblies, Ed Allen, ASUO president, announced.

These students will be in charge of student assemblies.
