

Professor Sets Religious Talks For Weekend

Dr. Green Opens Two Meet Series Saturday Morning

Consultations on "Religion in Higher Education," by Dr. Theodore M. Greene, professor of philosophy, Princeton university, are scheduled for university faculty Saturday, November 3, 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., and for student Sunday, November 4, 2 p.m., it was announced today by Dr. C. J. Sullivan Jr., assistant professor of philosophy.

Aesthetics in art will also be explained by Dr. Greene under the title, "Art As Insight," from T. S. Eliot's book, "Four Quartets," Friday, November 2, 7:30 p.m., 12 Friendly hall, said Dr. Sullivan.

"An agreement on religion in education by receiving the opinions of faculty and students," is the purpose of the discussions asserted Dr. Sullivan, "to arrive at—in time—some consensus of opinion as to what religion should be in education.

Dr. Greene, now visiting Stanford university, has been selected for the religion in education query, for his genuine interest in both religion and education, it has been announced by the organizations sponsoring the consultations.

Sponsoring organizations are, "The American Council on Education," "The National Council on Religion in Higher Education," and "The Edward W. Hazen Foundation."

Rock Hunters Brave Storms To Study Soil

By BEVERLY JAMES

In spite of rainy weather, Dr. W. D. Smith, professor of geology and geography, took his geology class on their second field trip of the season Saturday and Sunday.

They visited Fern Ridge dam and the silica sand plant, which are just west of Eugene.

Dr. Smith said that one could learn more on one of these field trips than by listening to ten lectures.

The student inspected the various rocks and saw with their own eyes the very thing they had been studying about, erosion. They saw how the once-hard rocks were, after thousands of years of exposure to wind and rain, slowly being decomposed into soil. Yes, they had read about it in books, but out there amidst the vast masses of rock, it seemed more real, and they could hardly believe the fact that they were actually crumbling with their hands that stuff which appeared to be hard rock. The girls didn't know whether it was their basic or just weak rocks which made this possible.

Steinbeck Film To Be Shown

The superbly-acted movie version of John Steinbeck's famous novel, "Of Mice and Men," will be shown as the full-length feature picture Wednesday night in 207 Chapman hall. Burgess Meredith, Lon Chaney Jr., and Betty Fields portray the main characters in this drama. Its morbid theme is typical of the Steinbeck style.

For those who have not read the book, it is a rather pathetic story of a mentally-deranged man who is fond of soft things and creatures, and unwillingly and unwittingly kills them in his passion to caress them in his huge, strong hands.

This film is in compliance with the Educational Activities Board policy of bringing one Hollywood-produced film to the campus each term of the year. Selected short subjects will also be offered.

It is expected to take one and one half hours for the three rolls of film to be shown. There will be two continuous showings from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. Students, faculty members, and townspeople are invited to attend these pictures of the free movie series.

The famous King Tutenkhamon ("Tut" to Americans) whose tomb was investigated in 1922, is thought to have been about 12 when he was crowned.

Limestone is the most widely used of all rocks because of the great variety and importance of its industrial uses, and because of its widespread occurrence.
