Coed of the Week... Janet Douglas Directs Mortar Board Activities

"My biggest project as president of Mortar Board is to try and get seven busy senior girls to meet at one time," laughed Janet Douglas, who has been chosen Coed of the Week. Janet is a tall, slim, brown-haired senior with blue eyes and an active interest in her fellow students at the University because she is second vice-president of ASUO. An all-around activity girl, she was president of Hendricks hall last year which she counts as the largest and most interesting office of her college career up to this point. Her room in Hendricks carries out her love for green and shades of green although she admitted that her wardrobe also contains blues and an occasional watermelon sweater. She is proud of her single room on the first floor of the dorm and explained that she wasn't able to get a single room last year so by a little conniving she got it this year.

"Raggedy Ann" has been a constant companion of Janet ever since high school days. As the name might imply, she is a doll, but what a doll! She stands two and one-half feet in her stockings and has quantities of carrotcolored hair. She occupies an important position on Janet's couch and the only drawback is that she isn't able to cram for her owner's tests.

Junction City, on the way to Portland, if you are going slow enough," Miss Douglas said. She has no chance to forget about it as spare time reading, this week's she goes home every Saturday to teach nine grade-school students in the fine art of piano playing. This is her main hobby outside of her major, sociology.

"Anyone have a spare record player?" asked the Co-ed of the Week hopefully. It seems she fairly dotes on classical records and has quite a collection, but lacks that important instrument.

Already starting to plan the Mortar Board ball, the prexy says it looks promising because of a larger male attendance who will make it a bigger and better dance than has been possible during the war years.

Plans for the immediate future after graduation? They are not definite, but Janet thinks she will teach for a while and then continue her schooling.

Frendly rivalry is carried on between her sister and herself as her sister attends Oregon State. That is one of the main reasons she wants Oregon to win the Homecoming week game.

Going to Annapolis for her brother's graduation from the United States' Naval academy is one of her big memories. Outside of that, she has been to Canada "You can't miss my home town, several times and has traveled to othr parts of the United States.

Laying down the "New Yorker" which she spends most of her co-ed said in a serious tone. "I have noticed a more prominent feeling of unrest during this first post-war term than was prevalent during the actual war years."

Campus Clad

Put down your books, gals and pals, forget that mid-term just a minute and take a look at some of the brighter things in life.

Holding the key to his heart is newly-engaged Barbara Hessmer, in a new tailored aqua jumperdress with a round, slit neck. She wears it with a chocolate brown blouse. Joan Heron attains perfection in the sweater-and-skirt world in a white, blue, and green pleated skirt, combined with a white sweater trimmed in the same plaid as the skirt.

In a smooth black wool skirt and geranium-pink wool bodice is Mae Bignell. This suit will be a wintertime favorite. Speaking of suits, have you seen Carolyn Tyler in a smartly tailored suit of tan, brown and blue check. She calls it her basic suit, but we call it a classic inspiration. The designer of Virginia Walker's black and mist-blue dress must have had her in mind, as it emphasizes the young way to wear black. Virginia Tapfer in a three-piece suit of herring-bone tweed will be all set for the big game this Saturday, and we hope to see you all there.

Giving a new slant to the classroom outfit was Jo Kasmeyer in a gray plaid skirt with a soft gray wool blouse tucked in at the waist. Margaret Deines had on a unique combination of a brown checked skirt with one pleat in front, and a leather belt. Her sweater, a luscious white cashmere, topped it It's "let's relax" time with Jean Jacoberger in a pair of red plaid slacks and a red wool shirt. Absolutely fascinating. Sweet rhythm is the word for Joanne Shields in her black dressmaker suit, featuring a moulded bodice and long dolman sleeves.

At some of the gala social events of the past week-end it was noticed that formals have once again moved into the spot light. Dancing to the theme of Indian Summer was Signe Eklund in a flowing white formal with sparkling rhinestone straps. Betty Bennett was sprinkled with stardust in a gold satin formal, with sophisticated lines and a revealing slit at the hem. She had on half-gloves to match. Oh, that we all could be as warm and look as elegant as Averill Foster in a dream of a blue. Norwegian fox fur coat . . in the popular three-quarter length.

Men Overlooked

It has been brought to this reporter's attention that the men on this campus have been greatly over-looked when it comes to being seen on the football field . . . Look for Dick Smith under the padded shoulders of a smart sport jacket. The belt in back adds a definite note of interest. Among the collection of sweaters of one Ed Evans, a smooth gray cardigan cashmere could be found. Oh, well, that is just one of the many. Reedy Berg is really flashing it in a red and black sport jacket and a red rain hat to match. Seen in a handsome gray flannel suit with white pin stripes was Jim Kroder . . . Hal Bailey is keeping a head of the best of them in a very masculine brown pin-striped suit . . . Catching the eye of may a wonder miss was Dick Wilkins in a teal-blue suit with a maroon shirt and a flashy bow tie.

First it's rain-then it's bubbles-or have you noticed the spherical glycerine floating around on the downtown streets and around the campus: "Life" says that they are just a relaxation for people after the tensions of war. If the bubble fad continues at its present rate, it will soon pass the yoyo craze of yesterday.

Everyone is trying to grow a long beard for the Sophomore Whiskerino but will probably end up with no more than a five o'clock shadow. We present you with this one thought:

So soft, so smooth And just rub in; Spread over face And then on chin, Shurma Bave.

There have been many inquiries about the proper dress for the Webfoot Roundup in Portland this weekend. Emily Post-mortem suggests jeans, plaid shirts, and a souwester.

If you're having a hard time figuring out what to do Saturday night after the game up there, run down to Devine's Candy Land and watch the automatic taffy

Open letter to professors in general: Dear Profs, All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy.

An annual editorial comes out on McClure's own mold of a meteorite. Won't students cooperate? Your man in the service would be proud to show his bunk mates a picture of you with your hand resting on this great stone. Solid.

It is the time of year for doughnut sales to flourish on the campus. May we suggest to the 8 o'clock professors that they brew coffee for the class members. We'll bring the doughnuts.

We are impressed with all the snappy delivery services offered by the various campus hangouts. We suggest that the library inaugurate the idea, too, or they will lose all their trade.

The annual Homecoming Weekend will be resumed this fall. The committee in charge is urging students to contribute themes to the contest. We suggest:

"A meeting of the clan, For your and my old man."

The chipping sparrow has been called the hairbird because of its fondness for horse hair which it uses for its nest.
