

Webfoots 3-1 Underdogs Sat; Huskies Have Leicht Complex

Bob Reynolds Set For Tilt; Oliver Works On Iron Line

The Oregon eleven will be on the short end of 3-to-1 odds at Multnomah stadium Saturday. During the week Tex Oliver had his gridmen work on defensive plays to offset the Huskies well-balanced attack. Bobby Reynolds, newly-initiated quarterback for the Oregon team, is reported in good condition. Bobby suffered the worst of cuts and bruises in the UCLA game, taking more punishment than any other player in a Duck attempt to hold the Uclans squad last Friday night.

Iron Men

Oliver knows he needs iron men in order to keep pace with the navy-strengthened Huskies. With a none too abundant supply of reserves, Oliver is relying on good condition of the first team to last most of the game this Saturday at Portland.

Coach Pest Welch of Washington is spending his time on the turf trying to convince high-riding Huskies the Oregon team is more than a Leicht worry. The Huskies have been informed through their head man of the ability in Oregon's candidate for All-American, Jake Leicht.

Good Average on Kicks

Leicht has averaged better than 55 yards on kickoffs, 40 yards on punts and has kicked two extra points from placement. Small as he is, his defensive work both in tackling and foiling the passes is not to be overlooked.

The Huskies, in their first encounter with Oregon, did not oppose Leicht, and Reynolds did not handle the T. With these two changes, the Oregon team and Oliver will be trying for a win.

No Match

The Washington team has no individual who can perform or match Jake Leicht, but their team is well-balanced, and backed with reserves, experience and a chance for the Rose Bowl.

Washington and Oregon have both given gridmen long workouts in the rain. Neither coach expects to be caught without some knowledge of what to do on a slippery turf.

Both teams will be able to have a full week of practice, because of the short distance in traveling hours to Portland for the two schools.

A capacity crowd of 20,000 is assured Saturday to add color to this momentous occasion, in football, via Portland.

Welchmen Set For Second Tilt With Oliver's Gridsters

Seattle, Oct. 31—Look out for Oregon! That's the battle-cry around the Washington Husky practice field today as the conquerors of USC's mighty Trojans get set for their second meeting with the Webfoots of Eugene at Portland. The Huskies survived the gruelling battle with no serious injuries. Only Gail Bruce, who saw no action against Southern Cal., may be on the sidelines at kickoff time in Multnomah Stadium Saturday. Bruce, regular right end, reinjured his right knee in practice before the Trojan game and hasn't suited up since. However, Marvin Hein, who played a whale of a game against USC as Bruce's substitute, scoring the Huskies first touchdown on a pass from Joe Stone, will be set at the right wing-post in the Oregon battle.

The Huskies are confident but not cocky. They know that Oregon is probably the best club on the Coast when they're "up" and figure Jake Leicht, Bob Reynolds & Co. will be loaded to knock them off.

Washington took a day off Monday while Coaches Ralph Welch, Sandy Sandberg, Tubby Graves and Steve Slivinski huddled in an all-important coaches' meeting to devise ways of stopping Tex Oliver's baffling "Oliver Twist."

Holding down the center of our Webfoot line and doing a wonderful job in both offensive and defensive playing is husky freshman, Bill Anderson.

A native of Long Beach, Bill bid farewell to sunny California and ventured north to continue his education and make a prominent splash in sport activities at Oregon. A graduate of Woodrow Wilson high school in Long Beach, he entered this fall as a physical education major, with plans on coaching a championship football team some day. By playing two years of varsity high ball, Bill has proved very beneficial to Tex Oliver in filling the key pivot slot in the forward wall, and should also be very valuable to John Warren as a swimming ace of the small but mighty swimming team.

Summer Life Guard

During summer months for the past three years Andy has cashed in on his ability to make with the arms and legs like a fish, by working as a lifeguard at one of the many famous beaches just out of Los Angeles. Although he favors the weather down south, he states, "I can't get over all the beautiful trees, shrubs, and well-cut grass on the campus. California schools have nothing to compare with Oregon as far as natural scenery is concerned, but as yet I haven't seen any girls that can compete with the women at home." Well girls, that is your cue to show a few of your hidden qualities because Andy leaves himself open for a change in mind.

Back Home Last Week

Bill felt right at home when the Ducks battled with Uclans last Saturday, but remarked, "My friends certainly showed a rough brand of friendship. After the game, I was a bruised and battered mess."

As to the remaining games the Webfoots have to play, Bill could see nothing better than a mighty victory over the confident Huskies Saturday and our "Civil War" rivals December 1. After football season, Andy will devote his athletic ability to the swimming team.

Footballers Haven

Along with most of Oliver's boys, Bill lives in Alder house where he tries to find time for his twelve hours of studies. But he admits that this job is next to impossible. "The fellows are really swell," commented Andy, "and they're always ready to lend a helping hand."

Due to the fact that his birthday is in December, Bill may be called into the Army in a few months because then he will be just the right age. If not, he will continue at Oregon for the remainder of his college career. Incidentally, Bill's little brother plans on following his big brother's suggestion and attend Oregon in about five years. Let's hope he possesses some of his brother's traits.

Another player on the grid home town, is none other than ex eleven that hails from Andy's Capt. John Kauffman who without a doubt should feel honored because of Bill.

Gal: "Am I the first girl you ever kissed?"

Gob: "Now that you mention it, you do look familiar."
