

Visiting Volcanologist Will Give Two Lectures At Condon Soon

Dr. Howell Williams, chairman of the department of geological sciences at the University of California, will deliver two lectures, "Paricutin: Our Newest Volcano," and "Volcanic Action: With Examples from Oregon," November 13 and 15 respectively. The two addresses will be given under the auspices of the Condon Lectures, which were established last year by the state board of higher education.

The lectures will be given in Library hall, of the Portland public library, November 20 and 23, and also at Oregon State college, Corvallis, November 27 and 29.

Liverpool Graduate

Graduated from Liverpool University, England, Dr. Williams served on a fellowship at Liverpool in 1923, receiving his master's degree the next year and in 1928 he attained his doctor of science degree. He also worked at the Imperial College of Science, and the Royal School of Mines, both in London.

Serving as commonwealth fellow at the University of California, Dr. Williams later joined the staff as an associate professor, until, in 1937 he was promoted to the position of professor, and as chairman of his department in 1945.

Prominent Geologist

As a member of the Geological Society of America, the Seismological society, Liverpool Geological society, and the Geological society of London, Dr. Williams is reputed to be one of the most competent men in the country in interpreting the scientific thought of his field into the non-technical terms.

Author of many books on the volcanos of the Navajo-Hopi country of Arizona, the Cascades of Oregon and California, Nicaragua and many other places, he has also written "Crater-Lake—the Story of its Origin," a non-technical book.

Paricutin, the subject of his first lecture, is found in the state of Michan, west of Mexico City.

Intended as part of a program for the interpretation of science for the layman, the establishment of the Condon lecture series was suggested by the late Dr. John Campbell Merriam, consultant and lecturer on the human values of science and nature.

ASUO Okays Pigging Of Married Vets At Games

Veterans and their wives may sit together in the student rooting section at the Homecoming game, Ruth Gifford, ticket manager for the ASUO, has announced. The student-veterans can use their activity cards for the game, and they can purchase tickets for their wives at McArthur court about ten days before the game, Mrs. Gifford said.

She also announced that applications are being taken at McArthur court for tickets although the tickets will not be on sale until later.

Reporter Nominated Victory Loan Queen

A candidate for queen of the victory loan was uncovered today on a reporting beat quite by accident. The junior chamber of commerce of Eugene is sponsoring Sallie Timmens, Gamma Phi sophomore in the University, as candidate for queen of the Victory Loan, it was learned Thursday from Harold Wyatt, manager of the Rex and McDonald theaters.

Miss Timmens, as a reporter on that beat, was asked to be this candidate. She had gone after news, little knowing how good it would be.

Libe Gets New Spine-Tinglers

Among new books in the library are a number of rental novels on the lighter side. Just the thing for dark, dreary nights are some real thrillers, many with a touch of humor to balance the chills.

"The Ghost and Mrs. Muir," by R. A. Dick, is a weird little spine-tingler about life in a cottage, haunted by the voice of a dead sea captain which casually strolls about the house. It's also good for a long chuckle.

Ruth Sawtell Wallis' "Blood From a Stone," deals with a young woman archaeologist, who, while in France, finds not the bones of a pre-historic animal, but the body of a very new corpse. To complete the list of mysteries is "Black Tarn," by P. W. Wilson. It is the story of an English reporter who covers Parliamentary activities, and of an occurrence in the House of Lords that nets him an assignment leading to ghosts, murder, and any number of surprises.

Poetry

Helpful for relaxing in these days of midterms are three books of poems; just the thing to set one's imagination wandering. Walter de la Mare is presented in a collection of well-known poems, entitled "The Burning Glass." Another collection, "Springboard" by Louis Macneice, reflects England under the ordeal of war. Norman Nicholson, a poet who is establishing an enviable reputation in England, is shown in an edition entitled, "Five Rivers."

Light Novels

Those enjoying light novels should like, "Orchard Hill," by Elizabeth Seifert, the story of quick wartime courtship, and a woman's marriage to a man she had only known for three months. Laid in contemporary China, is a

All-Campus Show Scheduled Tonight

The all-campus talent show, sponsored by the Westminster house, Presbyterian group, will be held at 8:30 tonight. The talent show, is the first part of the regular Friday evening open house.

Entertainment for the show will include an original poem by Claudine Biggs, palm reading by Dr.

tale, evolving business scandal, love, conflict, and patriotism. It is "The Small General," by Robert Standish.

D. G. Samuels, a piano solo by Jan Kok, and many others.

"These talent shows," explained Mrs. J. D. Bryant, hostess director of Westminster house, "are held once or twice a year to give some a chance to perform, to give others entertainment, but chiefly to give the campus a chance to find out who's who."

After the talent show there will be dancing, games, and refreshments until midnight.

If any of the living organizations on the campus have talent that has not yet been put on the program, there is still time to add it. Mrs. Bryant added.
